We move so many pianos we could give lessons.

In fact we do. The professionals from Despatch Moving and Storage that pad, pack, load, drive, and unload your possessions have received hours and hours of training long before we let them touch any of your belongings, let alone your Baby.

Despatch began moving people in 1910. Even then they realized the key to successful moves wasn't just strong backs and powerful trucks. It was heart. Caring about the people they were moving and the things that made their house a home were more important.

Today, the thank you letters we receive from our clients are music to our ears. Many of the words used strike a familiar chord — careful, friendly, understanding, professional, courteous, and efficient. We're not surprised. Moving pianos is not our only forte. Our staff knows how to baby your antiques, collectibles, fine art, furniture, as well as your floors and walls. In short, if you're planning a move call us — but only if you want to be babied in grand style.

Winning Entry

How Dangerous a Place Does Dan's Papers Travel? Abu Ghraib

By Dan Rattiner

Dan's Papers runs a contest every year to see how far away somebody can take a copy of our paper and send it back to us. It begins on September 2 when the season is over, and ends on September 1 the next year, after everybody's had a chance to travel. What the winner gets is $50. Twenty-nine years ago when we started this contest, the winner got $10. Inflation.

Practically every year that we have this contest, the winner comes from Western Australia, since that is the nearest landfall to the place in the Indian Ocean where, if you dug a hole in Bridgehampton, you would come out on the other side of the planet. Sometimes we don't get an entry from West Australia. So we go with East Australia. Or, as happened one year with Dr. Danziger of Southampton College who had a Dan's Papers parachuted down to him at his base on the South Pole continent of Antarctica, Base McMurdo. Never, however, have we tipped our hand before the end of September to reveal where a particular entry had come from until now. But this, we thought, was special.

Montgomery Granger, a Captain in the United States Army Reserve, has sent us this entry with the thought that we really ought to change the contest from HOW FAR DOES DAN'S PAPERS TRAVEL to MOST DANGEROUS PLACE THAT DAN'S PAPERS IS READ. As you can see, he would win hands down.

It is now the beginning of May. We would like to express the hope that when September comes and we have to tally up the winner of this year's contest, Cpt. Granger is safe and sound in his home in Port Jefferson. We would like to express the hope that all our young men and women, come September, are home safe and sound to their families here in the States.

Here is Cpt. Granger's entry:

April 14, 2005

Dear Dan's Papers,

I was excited to hear about your contest, but a little bummed to discover in the issue in hand, that Western Australia was where I needed to be.

There are soldiers here from Western Australia, but I don't think that counts.

I'd like to suggest a new contest for this year: Most dangerous place a Dan's Papers is read (outside the continental U.S., of course). Then maybe I'd have a shot!

In any case, please count me "in" for this year's contest. I love Dan's Papers and usually pick one up every chance my wife and I get it, as she's a fan as well.

We hail from Port Jeff Station on the North Shore, where she is a BOCES teacher of the deaf and hard-of-hearing, and (when I'm not wearing a uniform), I am the District Administrator for Operations at the Comsewogue School District.

I am an 18 1/2 year veteran of the Army Reserves, and have been activated four times, mobilized three times, and deployed overseas twice since 9/11/01, including to Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, in 2002.

I am a Captain in the Medical Service Corps (Health Services Administrator) whose job it is to make sure we treat the bad guys adequately while we detain them.

So far in Iraq, I have worked at Camp Bucca, Abughraib, Camp Victory, and I'm currently on my way to Camp Ashraf

I hope you enjoy the photos! For more, go to our unit website at www.343mpdet.zoomshare.com for which I am the Webmaster.

Best Wishes!

South O' the Highway (and the North too)

Well, there's something good to be said about prison food. Martha Stewart is 20 pounds slimmer than she was when she went in and looked absolutely great — she was a model, after all, in the bad old days — as she previewed her upcoming NBC syndicated show "Martha" for the press on Tuesday. We just have to keep her away from those steaks at the Palm.

Paul Townsend, the pioneer founder of Long Island Business died at 86 the other day. He cared very much about the Island and will be missed.

East Hampton's Jerry Seinfeld has written "Bee Movie," a cartoon animation production via Steven Spielberg's Dreamworks. It's about bees and the voice-over cast includes numerous Hamptonites, such as Renee Zellweger, Larry King, Uma Thurman and Robert Duvall. It will release in November 2007. Animations take awhile.

Hugh W. Wyatt has been named the new Chairman of the Board of the Bridgehampton Child Care and Recreation Center.

Stephen Cassidy, the union boss of the New York Fire Department, suffered a small fire at his home on Tanners Neck Lane in Westhampton Beach this January. The weird thing is that the local fire Marshal's report says it was intentionally set, according to the New York Daily News.

More Hilton. Watch "I Want to Be a Hilton" on NBC, June 21. Paris and her mother, Kathy, look for a Paris look-a-like. Incidentally, Paris lost her dog, then her cell phone, and now her laptop. It's somewhere in L. A. Who thinks this stuff up?

Hamptonite Nicole Miller launched her new lingerie line the other day, with full figured strippers as the models. The show was held at Scores West.

The estate of Ted Ammon has sued electrician Danny Pelosi for bludgeoning to death the East Hampton millionaire. They want $100 million. Pelosi is broke and in jail for 17 years. Whatever.

Aretha Franklin, who doesn't fly, will be arriving in Southampton in her own bus when she spends two weeks there in July on an estate she has rented. Her long-time agent, Ruth Bowen, who used to have a home in Quogue, is planning to bring Aretha to the Parkinson's Disease Foundation gala honoring her (Ruth's) friend Page Morton Black. It's May 19 at the Pierre Hotel. Bridgehampton's Isobel Robins Konecky is a chair for this

COME TO POTATOHAMPTON 10K JUNE 4

By Dan Rattiner

The Dan's Papers Potatohampton Minithon is coming. This year's event will be the 27th annual Potatohampton, a 10k affair that takes place along the back roads in Bridgehampton and Sagaponack to kick off the summer season in the Hamptons. The gun sounds to start the race at 9:30 a.m. on Saturday morning, June 4 on Ocean Road, just 200 yards down from the Monument in Bridgehampton. It ends three hours later when the last stragglers come in. In between is everybody else.

The Dan's Papers Potatohampton Minithon is the oldest, continuously-held running event on Long Island. It pre-dates the Long Island Marathon, it pre-dates the Shelter Island Run.

It comes from a time when the New York Marathon consisted of maybe eleven people trying to run 26 miles through traffic in that town. When exercising was pushing a manual lawn mower, digging potatoes or lifting weights sold by Charles Atlas. As for running along in the road, that was for fanatics.

Well, we started the race for these fanatics, and the idea was to show them how beautiful the farmland was here in Bridgehampton and Sagaponack. You could run through these fields along the narrow farm roads and admire the scenery, the potato fields and the dairies and also the Sagg General Store, the Sagg School, the Berwind Windmill, the Sagg Bridge, the Bridgehampton Monument and Bridgehampton Main Street. Most of these things are still here. And the race continues.

For those who have attended races from prior years, please note that this year's race is NOT on the morning of Saturday on Memorial Day Weekend, it is on the Saturday morning of the week AFTER Memorial Day weekend, June 4. There is now too much traffic on the roads for Memorial Day Weekend.

Among the many sponsors this year are Shape Magazine, Clear Vision Optical, Pepsi Bottling Ventures (Gatorade/Aquafina), Adrienne Vittadini perfume, Runner's World, Nabisco, Bib #'s Bodywedge21 Fitness Systems, World Gym, Nancy Kouris/Michele Engels Massage and many others. If your firm would like to make a contribution or be a part of the sponsorship of this race, please call Jean at 631-537-0500. ## The Bridge That Will Be Over Something, Someday, is Open

By Dan Rattiner

There've been a lot of attempts to mess with Mother Nature here on the East End over the years. And most of them have resulted in disasters. But they keep trying.

The latest attempt is going on in East Hampton, where local officials are working to open a channel that closed up after a storm. With the channel closed, the north end of Accabonac Harbor up in Springs lost much of its shellfish, because there is no tidal flow between that part of the harbor and the bay on the other side that might flush it out and refresh the salt water that is there.

Baymen, clambers and other harbor fishermen have been clamoring that something be done. They began hollering in 1944, about ten years after the channel closed. But what did anybody know at that time? Instead of opening this channel, the people in charge decided instead to further widen the main entrance in the south, something that made everything worse. As a result of this meddling, huge quantities of sand washed into the harbor over the years, covering everything underwater to a depth of about five feet. As a result, about one quarter of the entire harbor simply went dead with a fine coating of underwater sand. While up in the north, the bay bottom remained fertile, but the shellfish continued to find it not to their liking.

Having another look at the situation, one year ago, which was sixty years later, the Town Trustees decided once again to have everybody involved pitch in and reopen the closed cut in the mark about a million dollars to reopen the northern cut. And three weeks ago, with the new concrete bridge bearing Gerard Drive completed over where the cut would be, some boulders were removed, the water began running underneath to connect the bay to the harbor, and, after all the cheering and celebrating, a fairly ordinary northeaster flew in and plugged the thing back up with sand again.

As someone said at the time, it was a bridge going over nowhere. A rather attractive one, I might add, but nevertheless. There are those that say all this town money has just been thrown out the window.

You could buy three affordable housing units with one million dollars. Well, maybe two units, or one unit, or half a unit.

After the storm happened, which was two weeks ago, everybody involved in the project pointed a finger at everybody else to indicate they did the right thing but everybody else did the wrong thing. What they all agree on is that none of the involved organizations talked very much with any other organization about anything. We just ASSUMED that... was a pretty common comment. Anyway, some boulders along the sides of the dry "cut" were moved around to the other side of the bridge — that is from the harbor side to the bay side where north. Perhaps a reopened northern cut would allow some of the sand at the main entrance to find its way back out. Maybe shellfishing would revive. Certainly, nothing BAD could come from reopening that northern cut. Maybe.

The Trustees approached the Town and the Town, after involving the Town Department of Natural Resources, Dunn Engineering of Westhampton Beach, the State Department of Environmental Conservation, Terry Construction and others, voted last year to ear-they were supposed to be in the first place, or maybe they weren't supposed to be in the first place, and the cut was reopened, and everybody is hedging their bets. Better to go with Mother Nature rather than the Humans at this point.

"It'll close again," is the new cry.

"What we need is a dredging permit," said a Mr. Mott from the Town Environmental Department. "We may never need it. But if it did close again, we'd be able to dredge it open without delay."

Right.

The other interesting thing about this is whether, even if they are successful, this northern cut is going to do any good. Maybe they will get the cut open — I mean with global warming and sea level rising it HAS to open sometime in the next hundred years — and the shellfish in that northern part of the harbor will just find their way out on the flush tide and never return. (We're FREE! FREE AT LAST!) There is a lot humans don't know about the workings of tidal flow in a complex wetland situation such as this. And many of the environmentalists who've been working on this project, and who say nobody asked for their opinions or suggestions once the money was allocated and the construction firm hired, will be happy to tell you this.

In the meantime, you might want to go down there, walk out to the center of the bridge and lean over the railing and look down at whatever the hell is down there on the day you go, and contemplate the follies of man. (It is, currently, closed up once again.)

Think of Thomas Edison. One fine day in August 1885, he came out to the Hamptons and observed a fine black powder of dust all up and down the beach. He gathered some up and put it in a bottle. Back at his lab he had it analyzed. It was iron. So he came back to the Hamptons, went to the place where he saw the dusting of the black powder, which was at Quogue, noted that it was still there, and built a factory right there on the beach where he could gather the stuff up and pack it in barrels and cart it away to sell it at a profit.

The day that the factory was supposed to be ready to begin operations, however, a storm came in and washed all the black powder out to sea. Just like that. Edison and his workers waited. It didn't come back. So they abandoned the factory and went back to New Jersey. One month later, the black powder returned. But the day after that it was gone again.

Perhaps you've seen it from time to time. It comes and goes. Don't get any ideas.

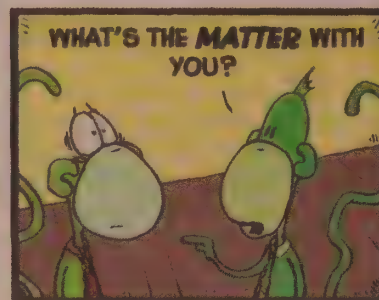

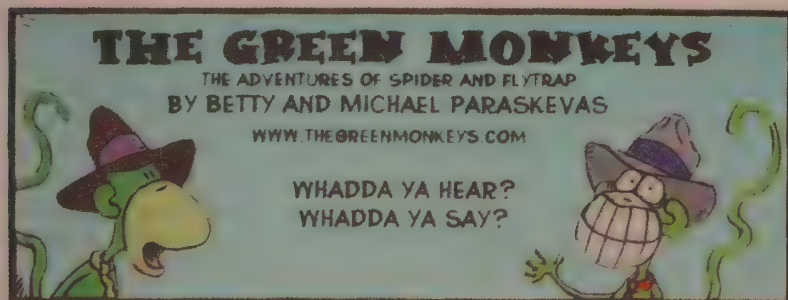

As for Edison's factory, storms and high tides long ago washed away all traces of it except for a few pilings. As I said at the start, don't mess with Mother Nature.

Tiny New Universe is Banged Out By the G-ds of Brookhaven

By Dan Rattiner

What if I told you that just forty-five minutes away from here, scientists conducted an experiment recreating the Big Bang? What if I told you that they succeeded in making one? And the results were entirely different than they had anticipated.

"It's like we've come ashore and we're on a new continent," said Sam Aronson, the associate lab director for high energy and nuclear physics at the Brookhaven Laboratory.

Using the very latest piece of scientific apparatus, they hurled two atoms at one another at the speed of light. And there it was. A new universe. But not one composed of expanding gas.

One composed of a bubbling cosmic soup, the consistency of peanut butter. Exactly what it was like when our universe began.

"It's not what people expected," said Matthias Grosse Perdekamp, a physicist at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, indicating how surprised everyone was.

And so, it seems, the beginning of time began not with a Big Bang, but with a Big Splooch.

"Think of it as a kind of anti-molasses," said Dr. Aronson to eager reporters at the annual meeting of the American Physical Society in Tampa, Florida last week. The goop is composed of quarks and glutens. And it expands and cools and after a while it solidifies into atoms and molecules, and then rocks and water and fish and animals.

How can we East Enders allow such a dangerous activity to take place right here in our backyard? This is a populated area. And in fact, it is populated with some of the most important people on the planet. One month ago, Shell Oil announced that it wanted to build a petroleum processing plant in Long Island Sound nine miles off Riverhead and everybody went nuts. Twenty years ago, the Long Island Power Company wanted to build a nuclear plant at Shoreham here on the East End, and it touched off demonstrations. What

MICHAEL JACKSON & THE WITCH OF EAST HAMPTON

By Dan Rattiner

I've been following the trial of Michael Jackson with considerable interest, just as everybody else has, including you, even if you won't admit it.

Except for one bit of testimony, where a security guard at Neverland testified he saw Jackson having a sex act with a boy ten years ago, I see nothing that would convict him. The boy, who is now 22, and whose mother also says it happened to him won't testify. So if you believe this security guard, you convict Jackson. If you do not believe this security guard, you don't convict Jackson.

Personally, I don't believe the security guard.

I think it would be very likely that over twenty years of Jackson being a public figure you'd come across somebody who worked for him who would tell a story like this for whatever reason.

And so I think it's rather sad. Michael Jackson is really on trial for what the general public considers bizarre behavior, and for what surely is bizarre behavior. It might be okay if this person was a sanitation worker living down the block. You'd just say okay, he had too much plastic surgery, he wears crazy clothes, he loves kids, built a great kid's amusement park in his backyard and he somehow changed his skin color and became a white man. So just keep this guy away from me, okay?

What IS inappropriate behavior, with other people's kids? Well, lots. But then if you invite them to your house and present yourself as a second daddy to them —most of these kids need daddies — you get to hug them, tousle their hair, even lick their heads. It's part of the job. Sleeping in the same bed? I did that with my own kids when they were little. We all have. I grant you that officially Michael Jackson is not a father to these unfortunate kids, but from his perspective, he is. Certainly he thinks he is. And he thinks this is a good thing. The testimony supports that.

if there were an explosion? Nobody could get off the island in time. The Power Company had to abandon their plans after everybody demonstrated. What is going on here? Here they are, playing with fire, with the very creation of the universe, right here on the East End and nobody even KNOWS this is going on?

And they talk, apparently with pride, that things went sort of wrong. No Big Bang. Just a whole lot of goop. That is expanding and expanding, from a very small beginning to be sure, but nevertheless. Some day, just as sure as the Big Bang led to Earth and the Solar System and a million universes, screeching through space to get away from one another, there will be this new group of universes doing exactly the same thing, or maybe not exactly the same thing. Maybe there will be things with one eyeball on a stalk and other monsters. All from a universe that began when they banged a couple of atoms together inside the Relativistic Heavy Ion Collider at Brookhaven, New York.

And what else have they done? Do they even know? Our older universe now with a tiny rival universe created right here on Long Island?

God help us. Or should I say, God don't hurt us. As for me, I didn't do this. I knew nothing about it. It was those other people in the white lab coats who are acting as if they are you. I'm the one who is telling on them.

The Big Bang, as seen from afar.

When people experiment making new vaccines for animal diseases on a high security island off Orient Point, everybody raises a big stink about it. When people put arsenic in the ground to kill potato beetles before they can attack the potato crop, everybody makes a big stink about it. People didn't even like all the noise that you heard when they allowed drag racing at Westhampton or Gran Prix Racing in Bridgehampton and we made it all go away.

And now we are supposed to put up with THIS?

Talk about dangerous. People have a right to live in their homes, without having to worry about what might happen just forty-five minutes away. And the least of the worries is that this might have gone terribly wrong and in an instant made a parallel universe and ended life on earth as we know it. The much more important worry is what God will do when he (or she) finds out — God, I hope this little article I'm writing doesn't tip him off. I can hardly imagine what he or she would do. At the very least throw a lot of lightning bolts at Brookhaven.

Americans have a right to expect that if they want to experiment with atomic bombs they do it on some deserted island in the Pacific, or in the desert in Nevada. Or if they want to dispose of nuclear waste, they do it in Utah. Or Montana. Americans have a right to this. It's in the Bill of Rights.

Right there.

Put an end to experiments here on the eastern end of Long Island with the Relativistic Heavy Ion Collider. Truck the Collider to Canada and try things out with it in Saskatchewan. Or down in Mexico. Labor is cheap there. Who cares.

And frankly, if they find anything else new down there about the beginning of the universe, we'd just rather not have to know. •

A Few Days and Nights Catching the Rays on Sagg Main

By Dan Rattiner

On the first sunny afternoon in April, down at the far westerly end of Sagg Main Beach down by the cut, I watched a 200 pound harp seal surf in on a wave, slither up through the foam and then haul himself up the beach on his stomach to sunbathe. He just closed his eyes and lay there, obviously ignoring me, and he stretched, rolled over on his side to get some rays on his belly, yawned, snoozed a bit, then woke up and waved his flippers a bit. It was springtime weather, almost 50 degrees out.

There really was nobody else on the beach on this fifth day of April besides us two, but occasionally, strollers or joggers would appear and the seal, noting that something else was interrupting the peacefulness of his afternoon, would arch his back so his little head would be way up in the air, and, with an air of curiosity, face the interloper. Like most harp seals, he had a very expressive face, and clearly, none of this bothered him. He was just interested to see what this all was. He'd wiggle his whiskers. Yawn again. Raise his eyebrows. He had these big, shiny, black panda bear eyes with long lashes. And once he saw who it was, he'd lower himself down, lie on his side to sunbathe again, and go back to little snooze. That's what he was there for, anyway.

His first visitors were a man, a woman, and a seven year old boy.

They walked down the beach, talking to one another, and then they stopped. There was this five foot long seal lying on its side, grey with dark grey spots all over. It had two stubby fins, a tail, and it was covered with a light fur. He about twenty feet away, I watched all encounters between the seal and various humans. Here is how they went.

A blue Ford pickup truck with two fishing poles on the roof of the cab came down the beach and a man in jeans got out. He looked at the surf, then saw the seal, stared at it, and then saw a young woman coming down the beach following his truck tracks.

"Did you see the seal?" he asked.

"Where is it?"

She had a German accent.

"Over there."

"Is he okay?"

"They rarely do this, come up on land like this."

"Is he an AMERICAN seal?"

"Some kind of seal. Maybe a sea lion. Do you have a camera?"

"No."

"I think he is just resting," the young man said.

"Oh. And he'll go back in the water and find his family?"

"They may have swum off. So then it would be difficult. But maybe they'll come back for him."

This went on this way for a while. Then the two split up and went separate ways.

A man, alone, in a Jeep Cherokee four wheel drive pulled up. The way he arrived and

Although maybe she is going to have her babies right here."

looked good enough to go over and hug. Which the seven year old apparently had in mind to do.

"Bad idea," the father said. The kid stopped just three feet from the seal. The seal roared. The kid ran back to his dad.

"I didn't know they could do that," the woman said, gathering the boy to her. Then the three made a wide berth around the seal and walked on.

For the next hour, from a chair and blanket stopped, I guessed he had seen the seal from a distance.

"You going to take pictures?" he asked me.

I said I didn't have a camera with me.

"That's a shame. You going to write a story about him?"

Apparently he knew me. Or of me.

"Yeah," I said. "But I was thinking of calling the Sea Mammal Rescue service."

"You don't have to. He's fine."

"You sure?"

"Yeah. And I think it's a she. Very pregnant. Or not pregnant but very full of fish. I'm going to get a camera. I live nearby. And I think I have some fish he could eat in the freezer."

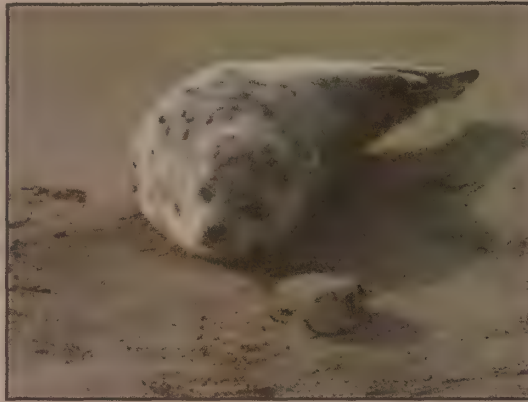

"You seem to know a lot about seals," I said.

"I photograph them all the time. I know a lot about sea mammals."

And off he went. Next to appear were a man and a woman on horseback. They walked their horses down the beach, got to within fifteen feet of the seal, stopped, the seal stared at their horses, and so they turned around and, still on horseback, walked off. Neither of them said anything.

A man approached from one direction walking a frisky laborador retriever. From the other direction came a man with an even larger dog, a painfully skinny whippet, who from the looks of him appeared to be an adolescent. Also with him were a woman and a boy of about eight. None of the dogs were on leashes. Both of the dogs, separately, were chasing things thrown by the humans they were with.

The man with the lab grabbed his dog's collar when he saw the seal. The man with the whippet could not get him, and the whippet ran ahead toward me and the seal, all frisky and tongue hanging out and I knew the seal would not tolerate this. He'd bite him in the leg.

I got up, and turned to face the whippet. Then I spread out my arms in joyful greeting, and the whippet ran right over to me and began licking my face.

The man was running behind saying sorry, sorry, sorry. But I had the dog by the collar. The man clicked a leash on him.

But now the boy skipped on past both of us and approached the seal. The seal roared again and the boy retreated.

"Josh, get AWAY from there," the man with the whippet said. And he collared the boy with one hand and the whippet with the other and, leaning over, led them off to the woman.

The man who had gone off to get his camera returned. He asked me to take some pictures of him feeding the seal, or trying to feed the seal and I said I would. Standing ten feet away from the creature — don't get close he said — he now opened a white plastic bag, pulled out a fish, tore a piece off it and threw it at the seal. As it landed close with a thump, the seal instinctively jumped up, sniffed the air, and then lay back down. Not interested.

"Fresh frozen farm raised striped bass. I can't believe it," the man said.

"Dinner?" I asked.

"Yeah."

The people with the dogs had now gone off. I took pictures of the seal with the man's camera, then took pictures of him with the seal. The man looked very thoughtfully at the seal.

"I think she might be in labor," he said. "Her breathing is very rapid."

Yes, it was. But he had looked like a him to me.

"And I think she just looks all normal. Although maybe she is going to have her babies right here."

The seal was rubbing the two halves of her tail together, sort of as if she was cleaning it. Then she again rolled over on his side and waving a flipper in the air, sighed happily. After awhile, she pulled herself further up the beach, past the piece of frozen fish, about a seal length past the fish, then she settled down again.

I gave the man back his camera and he went off. Then two women came down the beach

A Plan to Ease the Glut in Southampton's Courts Founders

By David Stoll

With the arrival of spring each year comes increased nerves about perennial summer season late night parties, share houses, and other nuisances. The problem seems insurmountable each year, because there is a finite number of police officers, other code enforcement officials, and Justice Court justices — all of whom are kept busy even during the off-season. The resources problem is particularly acute in the Justice Courts, because it is far easier for towns and villages to hire extra police officers and code enforcers than to create more judgeships. Moreover, the justices are quite busy with people accused of crimes that did or could have put people in harm's way (drugs, reckless driving, drunk driving, etc.), and we surely do want them to divert their resources from that work in favor of nuisance complaints. Yet, there is a solution, which the Town of Southampton nearly adopted this year: a quality of life court.

Quality of life courts can be structured in various ways, but most often the judges are not elected justices but rather administrative officials. After all, the point of the exercise is to free judges from the burdens of adjudicating nuisance offenses so they can focus on more serious violations. Because the quality of life administrative official is not a "real" judge, people who are fined for violations of the town or village code would have the right to have their cases heard by the justice court. Some people claim this a fundamental problem with quality of life courts: haven't we just created one more layer of bureaucracy? But the reality is that most people are not going to bother appealing a monetary fine of, at most, a few hundred dollars. Serious, repeat offenders, like certain night clubs, will avail themselves of as much court time as possible, but the guys in

THE GLOBE KEEPS WARMING AND NOTHING CHANGES

By Dan Rattiner

There were four events in the news this past week that, in a strange way, seemed to be connected. The first involves an American businessman who has made a deal with the Chinese to import Chinese automobiles. I didn't know they made automobiles in China. But they do. I saw a picture of one and it was a very handsome family convertible called a Chara. It was smooth and sleek and looked like a Porsche. I thought — ha, a Chinese car, probably fall apart, and then I thought, no it won't. The Chinese can make anything. And it's very high quality now. Pretty soon there will be a flood of Chinese cars in America, probably cheaper and better than American cars. As a matter of fact, economically speaking, China is the future. We are about to become Number Two in the world, and in very short order.

The second piece of news this week was the discovery that the heat hitting the earth from the sun is now being exceeded by the heat being given off by the earth. It is the proof of global warming. This is no drill. And there is no other explanation. The millions and millions of cars and factories in the world are indeed wiping out the ozone layer in an ever increasing amount, which is causing a trail of heat as we spin through space. We are beginning to burn up. Like a star. And even if we stop western civilization in its tracks tomorrow, the temperature of the earth is still going to rise one degree by the end of this new century before it starts to return to normal.

The third piece of news this week was the successful test flight of the European Jumbo Airbus. You think the world is not ready for this? The world is ready for a Airbus that carries 830 passengers, has a shopping mall, a spa, several restaurants and a movie theatre. This means more people, even more people, the share house down the block are simply not going to bother.

Two examples make the point about the utility of quality of life courts. Early during Mayor Rudy Giuliani's first term, he established a quality of life court as part of his campaign promise to make New York City a more civil place in which to live. When someone was cited for jay-walking, painting graffiti, loitering, noisy parties or any of the other types of offenses that were part of the City's fabric (excessive share houses not being applicable), if the person had no criminal record, he was sent to the quality of life court. It worked. Nuisance offenses plummeted, because people knew they would actually pay a price. Serious crimes also fell by margins exceeding those in the rest of the country.

The second example is closer to home. A colleague at this paper told me that he received a parking ticket last year. Like most people, he decided to appear in court to try to get the fine reduced. To his surprise, when he arrived in court on the date specified on the ticket, he did not have to sit in a courtroom filled with dozens of other people who were accused of a broad variety of traffic violations. Rather, he was sent to see a court official at a window in another room, who listened to his defense and then determined what his fine should be. My colleague was delighted not to have to spend the entire morning in court—and of course he didn't appeal to the justice court.

So, what happened in Southampton? Apparently, the regular justices of the Town Justice Court were concerned about adding a layer to the bureaucracy and just delaying the work they believed they inevitably would have to do, so they instead agreed to add more days to their individual calendars so they can hear more quality of life cases. While one should certainly appreciate their willingness to spend more time on the bench, it is not at all clear that this is the best result for Southampton residents. First of all, a quality of life court would presumably be open to hear complaints for more days than the added time to be devoted by the justices. Second, one may assume that the time the justices spend off the bench is spent in chambers working on more serious matters. Third, as mentioned above, creating a quality of life court will not simply delay the time before the cases come to the justices, but in most cases will remove the cases altogether, giving them more time to focus on more serious matters.

There may be other reasons why the justices asked the Town not to create the quality of life court, agreeing instead to take on additional burdens, and those reasons may very well be compelling. Moreover, perhaps the added calendar days will be sufficient to handle quality of life complaints. But there was nothing to lose by trying a quality of life court for this season; the experiment might have substantially diminished Southampton's summer nuisances. We'll see how this summer goes, and the Town can revisit the issue next year.

30th Anniversary

Vietnam Remembered on Church Lawn in Southampton

By Oliver Peterson

The crosses were many in number, like a little Arlington cemetery with a few stars and crescents tossed in. But they weren't just there for impact. They weren't just tossed in. Each of the over 1500 symbols on the lawn represented one life. One man or woman who is dead. That's the toll of war. It was a melancholy Saturday in Southampton, the rain was torrential, falling down in sheets. Fittingly, April 30th was the 30th anniversary of the fall of Saigon, the day the ugliness of the Vietnam War finally came to a close.

Despite the rain and the gloom, people filed in and out of the United Methodist Church on Main Street and Post Crossing Road to pay respects to the fallen and ponder what it all means. Inside, faces and names hung on the walls, across the room, and down the floor. One couldn't help but be reminded of the hundreds of posters displayed outside New York City's hospitals in the wake of September 11th, 2001. Again, you had to endure the memories of desperate families and loved ones, mostly searching in vain for the men and women buried beneath the rubble. This time, each face or silhouette represented one life taken in our wars in Afghanistan and Iraq. Right or Left, Hawk or Dove, politics aside, the impact was powerful. See it as a memorial to slain heroes fighting for justice or victims of a nation's misguided bid for money and power — it didn't matter. The lawn outside and this shrine to the dead were about lives, not politics. 1744 American lives had been spent in Iraq and Afghanistan as of Saturday, but even the 1500 staring out at visitors told a story almost too painful to bear. To be confronted by so many faces is very different than simply hearing numbers reported by television news anchors. Vietnam stripped us of 58,000 kids, but the fraction of that presented as more than a statistic was clear — while we sit on couches and help our kids with their homework, real people are

WRITER'S CONFERENCE AT SOUTHAMPTON COLLEGE

By Debbie Tuma

One of the sure signs of the season's start, for the past 16 years, has been the John Steinbeck Meet the Writers Book Fair, in early May. This is an opportunity for the public to meet and buy autographed books from the many well-known authors living throughout the Hamptons.

This year, the event will be held for the second time, under a tent at Chancellor's Hall, at Southampton College, on May 6. In previous years, it was held at the Benson Gallery in Bridgehampton. Elaine Benson, the former owner of the gallery, who is now deceased, was on the original Steinbeck committee, 28 years ago, along with Steinbeck's late wife, Elaine Steinbeck, author Wilfred Sheed, Joan Whitman, William M. Patterson, Bob Gerbureau, and others. Steinbeck's widow, Elaine, who was present at many of these functions, died two years ago, and since then, the former John Steinbeck Award was changed to simply the "Steinbeck Award," to commemorate both of them.

After the first few book fairs, this committee decided to present an annual award to a distinguished author, playwright or poet in the Hamptons community. Called originally the John Steinbeck Award, in honor of the great author who lived in Sag Harbor at the end of his life, it has been presented each year to such recipients as E.L. Doctorow (who got the first award in 1989), Kurt Vonnegut, Edward Albee, Lanford Wilson, Terrence McNally, Dava Sobel, Kenneth Koch, Peter Matthiessen, Betty Friedan, David Ignatow, James Salter, Wilfred Sheed, Susan Isaacs, Tom Wolfe, and last year, to Robert Caro. This year's recipient will be noted Sag Harbor playwright Joe Pintauro.

Since its inception in 1977, the "Meet the Writer's Book Fair" has raised funds for Southampton College, supporting the student dying every day.

"There's so much that's wrong with this war," said Erling Hope, one of the coordinators of the event. Mr. Hope, affiliated with the Interfaith Task Force and the Peconic Bay Quakers, explained that the crosses and the photos did different things. "The crosses and stars and crescents give the weight of the numbers, while the pictures give us faces," he said. Hope continued by explaining that his group was asked to participate without actually seeing the memorial. They took a leap of faith and seemed pleased with the results. "Do you see anyone you know?" he asked.

At 3 p.m., the diverse crowd moved into the sanctuary for a scheduled program of speakers against the war. Ken Komosky of the Peconic Bay Friends and Quakers opened from the pulpit. "No war is ever justified," he said. Quoting H.G. Wells as the inspiration for his career as a teacher, Komosky said, "The world is in a race between education and catastrophe." That teaching career subsequently got him out of the Korean War, where two of his students died in 1950. Komosky announced Reverend Jack King, our host, and minister of the United Methodist Church.

Rev. King spoke about the hours of work involved with assembling the exhibit and pointed out that boxes of tissues were available for those who needed them. "This has impacted me more than anything I've ever experienced," he said, "It's overwhelming." King followed his opening statements with a prayer. He was clearly shaken and emotional, fighting back tears as he led the congregation to pray for the fallen and the wounded, and the tens of thousands of killed Iraqis as well as those forced to bear witness to this devastation. He asked that we pray for peace and "nonviolent solutions to the injustices and oppressions that invite conflict."

Pat Hovey of the North Fork People of Conscience discussed the No Child Left Behind Act's law that makes secondary students' records and information available to Army recruiters. Former Army Ranger and creator of the event, Nicholas Cohen, then stepped up from behind his video camera to address us. The exhibit had moved from Union Square in Manhattan, to Greenport, to Southampton. He described the threat of an impending draft, and explained that all Americans were responsible for a "country that has grown belligerent over what has turned out to be untrue."

A period of robust silence followed to honor the dead before the day's keynote speaker, Reverend Osayefo Uhuru Sekou, from the National Clergy and Laity, took the pulpit. The powerful speaker with a cascade of dreadlocks led in the singing of "Amazing Grace" before his animated sermon. He quoted JFK, Albert Camus, and poets and scripture, sometimes screaming, at other times, hissing in harsh angry whispers. "The problem of the 20th century is a problem of the soul," he exclaimed. "The victims of history are displayed here," he said, "from an illegal unwise immoral war." His message was strong. "To be a Christian or Jew or Muslim is to be in opposition to war," he went on, "anything else is an abomination." Sekou denounced the Bush administration and anyone claiming to be of faith that accepted violence as an option, and said, "The most sacred act of a citizen is to engage in dissent." His message was received by a standing ovation.

Last, the Veterans for Peace, a group of Vietnam veterans against the war, had speaker Joseph Giannini reflected about his horrific experiences in Southeast Asia in 1967-68. Giannini was compelling and seemed to be running his own personal catharsis as he went on about "Bouncing Betty" mines, the death of his men and the destruction of the bodies and souls of not only soldiers but all those they leave behind. In the end, he was clapped off-stage as it seemed he might continue into the night. His pain and confusion over feelings of patriotism against anger and frustration over the nonsense of war was palpable. "They will never stop fighting us," he said. As of now, he's right.

Some would say that the media world has become nothing more than a Wild West Show, a traveling circus where people submit themselves to public berating for a chance at fame and fortune, where women go topless over the airwaves to win breast enhancements, where truth becomes more enticing than fiction; a place where men who claim to stand for moral values are addicted to prescription drugs, and "proper" and "improper" dance a drunken tango across an invisible, and slowly vanishing, line. They argue that in the center of this Ringling Brothers of the Absurd stands its 6' 5" ring leader with microphone and satellite transmitter firmly in hand.

Is it true that Howard Stern is the snowball that started the avalanche of American media? The catalyst that destroyed radio and spawned a generation of intense and, to varying degrees, offensive morning talk shows? Quite possibly, but so what? Sure his daily show is the closest thing to watching Cinemax After Dark on the radio, but hasn't he also made that traffic-laden drive down County Road 39 a little more interesting? A little less daunting? Hasn't he brought up an interesting point here or there? I mean he's a Long Islander, you didn't really expect sonnets to come out of his mouth, did you?

Okay, so he can be a little rough on the ears and has been deemed one of the worst dressed people in the country, but whether you love him or hate him (and there are millions of people on both sides of the fence) you must admit, he is a pioneer.

Born in 1954, Howard spent his adolescent years in Roosevelt, Long Island. Growing up in a ethnically diverse community, Stern became the subject of racial hate crimes and by the time he reached seventh grade, the beatings he sustained were occurring on a regular basis. Finally escaping the rough town of Roosevelt in 1969, Stern moved several miles west to Rockville Centre. Now fifteen, Howard still had difficulty fitting in. "It wasn't any better in Rockville Centre," he wrote in his 1993 autobiography, Private Parts. "I couldn't adjust at all. I was totally lost in a white community." But Stern eventually made friends and it is in these early days that the seeds of Howard Stern's media empire were planted in the form of an 8 mm film he made for his high school English class, which depicting the already six foot tall, long haired Stern towering over a crowd as he walked to the tune of "All the Lonely People."

In the mid-seventies, Howard attended

Boston University. At college, two sweepingly dramatic events occurred. Howard volunteered at BU's radio station, and he began to date Alison Berns. At the radio station, Stern and a its content, which included the segment "Name That Sin," where people confessed their most horrendous sins over the airwaves.

Stern graduated from Boston University in 1976 with a 3.8 GPA and a bachelor's degree in Communications. Two years later, Howard and Alison were married in Brookline, Massachusetts. His first paying radio job began at a small 3000 watt station back in New York. It was there that he began his now-famous style. Stern realized that simply announcing the names of songs over the airwaves wasn't going to be his calling. From there, he bumped around to several stations, living in Detroit, Washington D.C. and eventually returning to NYC in 1982 with his well-honed and already controversial deejaying techniques firmly in hand. He was fired from WNBC in 1985 for indecency, and then was picked up by WXRK and eventually broadcast nationally by Infinity Broadcasting.

In New York, his home for the past twenty-three years, Stern truly flourished, or slipped into complete moral depravity, depending on your point of view. Regardless, Stern's audience has continually grown, and now his daily morning show reaches over 25 million listeners across the United States. That might change.

Plagued with angry listeners and the sensitive ear of the FCC, Stern's show has been fined hundreds of thousands of dollars, banned from several markets, and censured by the Colorado State Legislature. So in little less than eight months, Stern will be moving his program to Sirius Satellite Radio, with whom he signed a 5 year contract for a reportedly astronomical fee. Whether this arrangement with Stern will pay off for Sirius has yet to be seen. Having a monopoly on the most wanted man in radio will surely have its benefits. They figure Stern will only have to bring 1 million of his 25 million listeners to the satellite station in order to make the deal work.

In addition to his radio show and the televised version on the E network, Howard has also run for Governor of New York, and owns the production rights to Porky's.

For much of his career, his wife Alison has stuck by him, no matter what the rest of the world thought, but in 1999 Stern and his wife of twenty-one years were legally separated and now share custody of their three daughters Emily, Debra, and Ashley. These days he can be seen cruising around town with his girlfriend of almost five years, model and actress Beth Otrosky.

One of the other things that has come out at this trial is, surprisingly, just how — beneath the posturing and the costumes — normal Michael Jackson is. Or insecure he is. I mean — he has a collection of girlie magazines? This guy can't find a girl?

I think Jackson will be acquitted. I think he will also be ruined. As long as there are people who want to believe what the gossips say about celebrities, there will be people who will not be able to stand just how publicly bizarre Jackson has chosen to be. He will always be Wacko Jacko and he will be convicted by the public, and just for that.

During colonial times here in the Hamptons, there was a woman by the name of Goody Garlicke who behaved outside of what was felt to be the norm. Nobody liked her. She told tales, was a gossip, was frightening to people. She got shunned by those in charge at that time, and then, when the daughter of Lion Gardiner, the prominent leader of the town, took sick and died in her bed, Goody Garlicke was arrested and charged with being a witch. It was said she had cast a spell on Elizabeth and that is what killed her.

In the end, just before she was about to be put to death, Lion Gardiner intervened and said that she ought to be tried first. At the time, the Hamptons (and the towns on the North Fork) were part of the Connecticut colony, and so Goody Garlicke was taken to Hartford, Connecticut where she was tried and acquitted for lack of any evidence.

Garlicke returned to East Hampton, but the townspeople continued to shun her, so she and her husband sold their house and moved to Gardiner's Island, where under the wing of Mr. Gardiner, they worked as servants and farmland hands on that estate for the rest of their lives.

Anyway, if Jackson is convicted, what the heck sort of jail do you send him to? Can you even imagine it?

I do realize I am not at the trial and so there may be things perceived very differently there. Perhaps he did do something and perhaps he will be convicted. I mean, all I have to do is look how differently things turned out to be at trial for O. J. Simpson from what I thought. •

Stern

Eventually, as with most celebrities, Stern made a home in the Hamptons. . . sort of. In December of 2002, Stern picked up his ocean front digs in Amagansett for the low, low price of $5.5 million. That summer he was met with a stunning surprise. His fans found out where he lived and began camping out on the beach, making the house anything but a relaxing getaway. So recently Stern has been in search of a new home in the Hamptons. Reportedly, he has placed his Amagansett house on the market to the tune of $9.75 million and shown some serious interest in two houses. The first, Henry Weldon's estate on Further Lane and the second, a palatial 24-acre spread in Bridgehampton. But before he could sign the contract on the property in East Hampton, another buyer muscled in and reportedly offered $1.5 million more than Stern was willing to part with. The estate in Bridgehampton is a similar story, and has been purchased by fashion designer Tommy Hilfiger.

Despite the constant attention by fans, Stern still makes his rounds out here, publicly sipping coffee at the Hampton Coffee House with girlfriend Beth, and grabbing dinner at Pacific East where he has been praised as, "The best tipper in the Hamptons, hands down." It all comes in stride for the media giant. And although he may still be looking for his little place in the sun out east, Stern's new home at Sirius Satellite Radio has firmly rooted him in the annals of radio history and is vindication for twenty-nine years of censure. It seems that only in outer space is he out of the grasp of the FCC.

traveling from place to place. More humming of cars and trains and planes and more crap in the ozone layer. Yes, the world is ready for this, because it is fun. But the earth isn't. It will mean more global warming.

The fourth piece of news involves two unrelated meetings of two world leaders each. The Russian Premier got chummy with the Israeli Premier. And the Vice President of Taiwan got chummy with the President of the Chinese mainland. How are these events related? Each one has been made possible by a recent entry into the fold of westernization. Israel has welcomed Russia. Taiwan has welcomed China. And now there are still more people on the earth that will be at peace with one another — because western civilization is so much fun — but there will be even more developed nations polluting the planet. Interestingly, the two new converts do not embrace individual freedom and participatory democracy. They are making the change without one man, one vote. Yet they are being embraced. It's all about the stuff — video games, cars and planes.

And so we hurtle into the future, making a bigger and bigger mess, and coming closer and closer to our own extinction. Which leads me to the fifth piece of news, the premiere of a movie made of Douglas Adam's A Hitchhiker's Guide to the Galaxy. In this work, the earth has heated up and exploded, with just one person surviving, our hero, plucked off the planet at the very last moment by a friendly alien. Adam's work is all about what this last person finds Out There.

What can we do about any of this? As individuals, not much, I suppose. Our government leaders aren't interested. Giving up or modifying the stuff to make the world pollution free is not a popular idea. The cost is too dear. The problem ain't going to come to a head anytime soon. And all the stuff — the global economy — is just too much fun.

When I was a boy, I thought that when you died, your soul went back up to heaven, got judged and got reassigned to another physical person. You'd come back down as a little baby, and live out your new life, hopefully doing good, or trying to do good, after which you'd go back to heaven, get judged and reassigned again.

A part of me still thinks this is how it all works. But now what I think is that when I die and go to heaven, I would not like to come back again as a human being. I think I'd like to come back as a fish. With global warming, the glaciers are melting, the land masses are shrinking, humans will retreat and begin to huddle into smaller and smaller spaces, and the world of fish will expand.

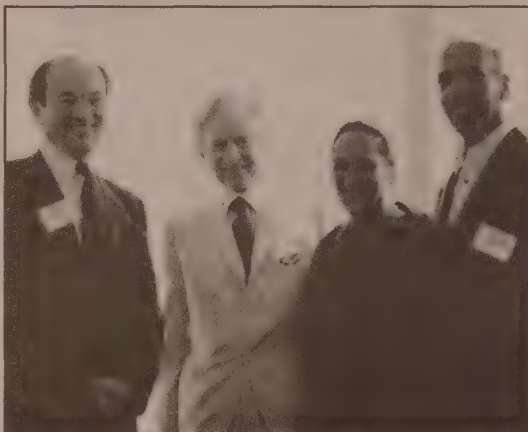

Just imagine being the first fish to swim over Manhattan Island, or over all the big ocean-front mansions of the Hamptons. What a rush. There will be new things to do, new places to live, new worlds to conquer. We'll be a species on the upswing. Yes, I could live with that. • writing awards, scholarships, and acquisitions of the college library. Kimberly Goff, who took over as a member of the Steinbeck committee when her mother died several years ago, said, "Although we do miss having this event at our gallery, the college has been a great venue for it, with plenty of room, and also being centrally located. This event has been growing in popularity every year, and everyone looks forward to it as the opening party of the summer season."

Although the future of the college is still up in the air, Goff said the graduate writing program is still in tact, as are other masters programs. "We also hoped we'd be buying books for the newly expanded library, but it's not open yet," she said. Instead, the Steinbeck committee will purchase books for the library on premises.

This year, Robert FX Sillerman, the college Chancellor, will be presenting the 17th annual Steinbeck Award to Joe Pintauro. Besides being an award-winning playwright, he has written two novels, "State of Grace," and "Cold Hands," which was selected by the New York Times as one of the best novels of the year. Pintauro has also written many plays, including "Snow Orchid," "Raft of the Medusa," "By The Sea, By The Sea, By The Beautiful Sea," and "Men's Lives," which he adapted from the novel by local writer Peter Matthiessen, and which was performed at Bay Street Theatre. His most recent play, "Beautiful Dreamer," is being produced in Los Angeles.

Carol Gilbert, Director of Development at Southampton College, said she expects this year's event to be the "biggest in both author participation and funds raised." She said Joe Pintauro is also a faculty member of the Southampton College Summer Writer's Conference, taking place this year from July 20-31. This includes readings, workshops and lectures by famous authors.

Tickets to the upcoming "Meet the Writers" event are $20 in advance through the Alumnae Office, and $25 at the door. Call 287-8347.

talking animatedly to one another and then when they saw the seal they jumped.

"Eeeek."

"Don't get too close," I said.

"Does he bite?"

"Yes."

They stood and stared at him for a while. Then one of them asked me if I had just thrown up the piece of fish next to him and I said no. And they went off.

The sun began to settle low on the horizon. It was almost six o'clock, and I thought, finally, I ought to call the rescue service on my cell phone. I couldn't just leave the seal there without informing the authorities.

A woman answered the phone. I told her what was going on. "Give me your phone number in case we are cut off," she said. It was the sort of thing you say in an emergency. "And I will transfer you to a biologist."

Soon I was talking to a biologist, who identified herself as Amber Sabrosky. She was in Riverhead. I was in Bridgehampton.

"It sounds like a harp seal all right," she said, after I told her what was going on. "A healthy one."

"The tide could go out, stranding him." (I had returned to thinking of her as a he.)

"He might stay there all night. Catch the next tide. He's fine."

I told her that we had thrown a piece of fish at the seal, but he hadn't eaten it.

"Don't feed the seal. There's a law against feeding a seal. They are a protected species."

I told her I had no idea there was a law against feeding a seal, although I could understand there'd be a law against feeding them, say, a Big Mac or a popsicle. "Actually we didn't actually FEED him. I mean, we just got a dead fish to be closer to him than it had been before. That's not against the law."

She was silent.

"Anyway, he just seemed to think somebody was throwing something at him."

"Okay," she said. "Well look, I think he is really all right. He can stay there all day and all night, even two nights. Then he'll just haul himself back into the ocean and swim off. I don't think he'll eat anything at this time. But I'll tell you what. Do you live nearby?" I told her I did. "Would it be too much to ask for you to go back out there in the morning and call and tell us if he is still out there?"

I said I would. But I didn't. In the morning, it was raining cats and dogs. It rained all day. No sunbather in his right mind would still be on the beach in Sagaponack. He'd get soaked. •

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

Sheltered Islander #347 Happy Mother's Day!

I have two friends who opted to stay on their professional career paths and not have children. They have plenty of money, drive late model cars, own their own houses. They know the differences between different cruise lines. They've been to several other countries. They have flat stomachs, few wrinkles, perky boobs, men still pursue them, and they are extremely happy with their choice not to have children.

I stayed in that group as long as I could, until I got pregnant, and then they threw me out! I tried to convince them that motherhood doesn't necessarily follow pregnancy. I could leave the kid on the steps of a convent, or on a ride in Disneyland, or maybe in a booth in a restaurant... I figured somebody would notice it and pick it up. But they said they'd heard that before, and that if I looked at it after it was born, I'd probably want to take it home, then I'd probably feed it, and it would be all downhill from there.

They were right, and two years later they were right again. But they were not right about it being all downhill. There are some plateaus along the way and there is a bottom. I know, for instance, that three or four weeks after I'm dead, I'll be able to stop worrying about the kids. By that time I'll have met with their guardian angels and reviewed their list of things to guard and I will make it clear to these angels that I will be watching them, so they'd better not slack off.

For the career gals who just fell off the wagon and motherhood is now less than nine months away, here are my pointers and advice.

* Any kitchen utensils you can't find are outside in the dirt.

* You will have sticky floors and a filthy oven for the next eighteen years.

* To insure a clean refrigerator, invite your mother over at least once a month. If your mother is not the "I have to clean something whenever I visit my daughter" type, you can rent mine for $10 a pop. She not only cleans, she scolds your husband for not helping you more!

* If your hubby thinks that working 40 hours a week is equivalent to 168 hours a week (that's 24 hours times 7), arrange to leave for a weekend and don't leave him any instructions since he thinks it's so easy. The kids won't die and he will learn a lot.

My ex made it nearly 16 hours before calling me. He was napping on the couch when our 2-year-old son beamed him with a full juice bottle. He woke to discover our 4-year-old daughter loved making cakes from scratch and could turn on the oven herself; his wallet and one shoe were in the toilet; and the cat had vomited. I would have listened to his pathetic yammering, but I was poolside at a friend's house and besides...., "how hard is it to watch two kids?"

* Your vacuum is your best friend. Get the one that sucks up Barbie shoes and Raisinets and comes with a fine comb attachment to suction out head lice.

* You'll have to read Goodnight Moon two to four times a night depending on whether or not you came up with an acceptable reason to give them cold formula Tylenol.

* Don't believe the advertisements. No car seat is easy to install or wrangle. You're better off putting the kid in the trunk if you can pull it off.

* Stop watching the news because anything happening to any child anywhere will make you crazy.

* You won't be able to read anything longer than a Reader's Digest article for a long time.

* Remember how you ridiculed women who watched soaps? Soaps become your friend. They show you that somewhere women have shirts without stains. Somewhere, romantic evenings are still taking place. Somewhere women have matching sheet sets.

For me, it was seeing a beautifully set table. My eyes would travel from the TV table to my table full of Tupperware and Beauty and the Beast bowls and then quickly back to the TV so I could delve into the fantasy of a small festive dinner party with friends. As I watched, my hand would glide over my table in search of stuck Cheerios to pick off.

So what's the upside? Well, once I got a bouquet of dandelions, snapped off at the heads, handed to me from a sticky hand. My daughter beamed as she said, "I pick these for my best mother I know..."

PERCY HEATH, 81

Legendary jazz bassist Percy Heath died on April 28th in Southampton, from bone cancer, at the age of 81. Heath has long been admired as a musical institution by his peers as well as his large fan base here on the East End and specifically in Montauk, where he lived with his wife, June.

Percy Heath was born into a musical family in Wilmington, NC, in 1923 and grew up in Philadelphia. His mom was a singer, his father a clarinetist, his brother Jimmy a saxophonist and brother Albert "Tootie" a jazz drummer. Percy polished his craft as a bass player while studying at the Granoff School of Music in Philadelphia.

Heath also served in the Air Force during WWII and as one of the Tuskegee Airmen pilots. Upon his return to a musical career, he began playing with the likes of Miles Davis, Dizzy Gillespie, Fats Navarro, Charlie Parker and Thelonious Monk, at such famed places as the Down Beat Club in Philadelphia and the Cotton Club in NYC.

One of the biggest musical breakthroughs for Heath was when he replaced bassist Ray Brown in the Milt Jackson Quartet, known as the Modern Jazz Quartet (MJQ). The MJQ included John Lewis on piano, Kenny Clarke (and then Connie Kay) on drums and of course Percy on bass. The MJQ had a great run (1952-1974) and was responsible for influencing many of the up and coming jazz ensembles that followed. Percy was the last living member of the band.

In 1975, Percy formed the Heath Brothers with Jimmy and Albert. The Heath Brothers also included pianist Stanley Cowell and guitarist Tony Purrone and they worked together through the early 80s. Percy was famous for creating a melodic bass sound on his cello that became labeled as a "baby bass."

Percy never truly retired from music.

However, he did manage to spend much of his later years enjoying another favorite pastime.....fishing. Percy loved Montauk because it was his favorite place to fish. His boat was appropriately named "Fiddler." Percy also loved the arts and was an artist himself. He was also a past president of the Montauk Art League.

"One of the finest people I've ever known," said Hal McKusick of the Hal McKusick Quartet. Mr. McKusick visited Percy while he was in the hospital and told me that he still had his "baby bass" at his side.

"Percy was the type of guy that could appreciate nature without catching all the time," said Joe Gaviolo (Gaviolo's Market).

"With all his fame and talent, he was one of the most regular people you would ever want to meet," said Eddie Ecker (Montauk Precinct Commander and friend).

"His humility was overwhelming," said Bill Aiken (President of Concerned Citizens Of Montauk).

There will be a jazz concert from 7 - 11 p.m., "Remembering Percy" on June 25th at Ruschmeyer's in Montauk.

Percy is survived by his wife June, and his sons, Percy III, Jason and Stuart Heath. He will be sorely missed.

OVER THE BARREL...

New (and More) Releases From Shinn Estate

Shinn Estate Vineyards in Mattituck has been one of my favorite North Fork producers ever since my first visit last fall. Then, they only had two wines available for tasting; a great value Chardonnay and a tremendous 2002 "young vines" Merlot, which was touted recently as Long Island's best red in a New York Times article by Eric Asimov.

I don't agree with how Asimov came to this conclusion (no matter how good the wine is) but let's get back to Shinn Estate Vineyards, which debuted four new wines at Windows On Long Island on April 25.

I've written several times about my love of Long Island Sauvignon Blanc, and I have a new crush -

Shinn Estate Vineyards 2004 Sauvignon Blanc-Semillon ($18) With a refined nose of grapefruit and lemongrass, green apple flavors highlighted with fine mineral character, and tongue-tingling crispness, this blend (which features 3 percent Semillon) is well balanced, and the ideal counterpart to fresh Long Island shellfish. It reminds me a bit of a New Zealand Sauvignon Blanc without the over-the-top herbaceousness.

Owners Barbara Shinn and David Page, with consulting winemaker Roman Roth, only produced 67 cases of Shinn Estate Vineyards 2004 Rose ($14), and believe me - it's not going to last long. 100 percent Merlot, it's a gorgeous salmon color and offers a lightly fruity nose and crisp Fuji apple flavors accented by hints of strawberry. This is a real thirst quencher, so try it as an aperitif this summer or with a picnic lunch.

The 2003 Shinn Estate Vineyards Merlot ($24) is a smooth, medium-bodied red that is eighty-eight percent Merlot, five percent Cabernet Sauvignon, four percent Cabernet Franc, two per-

BENEFIT CONCERT AT THE VAIL-LEAVITT FOR THE Dan's North Fork Goes To... 7th ANNUAL RIVERHEAD BLUES FESTIVAL

FESTIVAL BEGINS FRIDAY, JULY 8

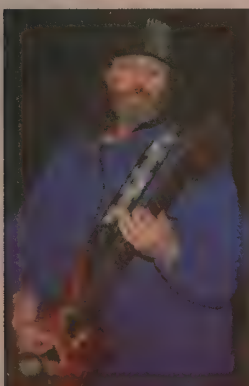

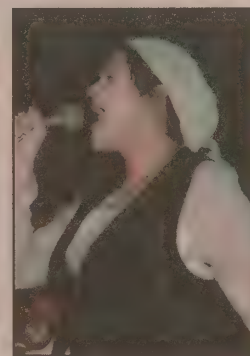

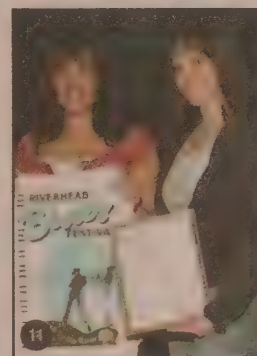

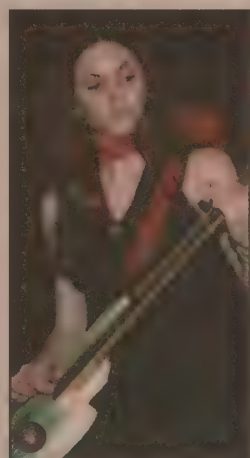

While the Riverhead Blues Festival is now less than two months away, the festival's executive director, Amy Auer, put together a Talent Show and Poster Contest in early spring at the Vail-Leavitt Music Hall on Sunday, March 13, to raise money for the event.

Little Curtis, owner of B & C Cosmetics, a local businessman and a musician in his own right, was the master of ceremonies as four bands competed against each other for a spot to play at the festival. The bands included BlueIce, Dan Becker Taskforce, The JP Blues Band, and The C & B Blues Review, who won the honor of playing the South Stage at the festival. The judges for the band competition were Phil Varca (of Phil Varca and the Slamjammers), Mario Staiano, Danny Kean, and Jim Moran.

However, Amy Auer surprised the bands (as well as the audience!) by announcing that they all will kick off the festival on Friday night July 8. C & B Blues Band will perform on the South Stage, JP Blues Band on the North Stage, Dan Becker Taskforce at the Vail-Leavitt Music Hall and BlueIce will be performing on the West Stage.

A poster contest for the festival was open to all Suffolk Community College Graphic Arts Department students. The winner was Liis Mendrik, who received a thousand dollar scholarship. The award was accepted by Laurey Russo, assistant professor of graphic design at Suffolk Community College. The judges for the poster contest were Pat Snyder (director of the East End Arts Council) and Debra Dunn of the Downstate NY Blues Organization. The poster will be used for promotion of the Seventh Annual Riverhead Blues Festival.

1. Pat Russo 2. Dave Swanson 3. Ricky Silecchio (all of C&B Blues Review) 4. Gina Tomitz (JP Blues Band) 5. Judges: Phil Varca, Jim Moran, Danny Kean, Mario Staiano 6. Jon Finney & 7. Bob Merrill (both of Dan Becker's Taskforce) 8. JP Blues 9. Dan Becker 10. Little Curtis Hightower (MC) and Amy Auer (Exec. Dir. of the festival) 11. Debra Dunn, Laurey Russo (Assist. Prof. of Graphic Design/Suffolk Community College) 12. Starlight Tyler (Dan Becker's Taskforce) 13. Frank Albino (BlueIce) 14. Brian LeClerc (Dan Becker's Taskforce) 15. Mike Wagner & 16. Frank Bavassa (both of BlueIce)

A Wine Writer Reflects on Windows 15

The 15th Annual Windows on Long Island Wine event, held April 25 at Capitale in Manhattan, has come and gone. Months of planning on the part of the Long Island Wine Council, Earth Pledge and participating sponsors, wineries and restaurants resulted in a great evening filled with great food, great wine and great people.

Because I'm one of only a few wine writers that cover our wine region extensively and regularly, few of the wines being poured were new to me. But, several winemakers and winery managers contacted me ahead of time letting me know that they were releasing some new stuff at Windows. I took the night off from taking my usually extensive tasting notes, but a few wines really stood out: Bridge Vineyards 2001 Merlot, Channing Daughters Winery's new Sylvanus,

The Old Field 2000 Blanc de Noir, Waters Crest Winery 2003 Cabernet Franc, and a barrel sample of Roanoke Vineyards Cabernet Sauvignon (probably released in the late summer/early fall) that was still a bit tight, but showed great promise.

And of course, how could I talk about the event without mentioning the food. Any time that you have so many top New York restaurants and food vendors in one spot, you're bound to eat well. Some of my favorite nibbles of the evening included Abboccato's beet and gorgonzola cheese ravioli, the warm truffled macaroni and cheese from Butter, Sapa's papaya salad with hanger steak, spiced banana panna cotta from Tocqueville and of course the amazing cheeses from Murray's Cheese Shop.

My fiancé and I really enjoyed ourselves and we look forward to next year's event, but the evening wasn't without at least one shortcoming. I think a better job could have been done situating certain restaurants next to certain wineries. For instance, Broadfields Wine Cellars, they of the rich reds, was surrounded by Asian-influenced cuisine – not a great match. Why not put Waters Crest Winery or Paumanok and their crisp, aromatic whites there instead? At the very least, the restaurants should be more vocal about making wine suggestions. Poorly paired food and wine keep both from showing their true greatness.

Even though this was a little sticking point with me, I'm not sure many of the hundreds of attendees even noticed. Everyone seemed to be having a great time. Not everyone is a wine geek, after all.

Equine Therapy

You've Heard Of A Horse Whisperer, But What About A Horse Massager?

By Roy Bradbrook

Usually, the settings for the assignments I work on for Dan's North Fork are in the context of a restaurant or theater or on a golf course. So it was rather different, to say the least, to meet up with Horse Massager David Sonatore in one of the horse barns on the Entenmann 'Big E' farm in Riverhead, adjacent to their Martha Clara Vineyards and winery. When you add in the facts that, on what should have been a spring Saturday afternoon, the rain was coming down torrentially and that the barn was also populated by a number of goats and very noisy guinea fowl apparently seeking shelter, this certainly was different.

But this assignment had promised to be different from the start. David is a Certified Equine Sports Massage Therapist and, whilst massage is a therapy I have often enjoyed receiving, especially on a beach in Bali, I had never realized that horses also benefit from massage therapy.

When I arrived David was working on one of Robert Entenmann's prize thoroughbred horses, Glaciers End, a beautiful, highly strung four-year-old gelding just retired from a successful racing career that included a win at Aqueduct. Glaciers End was now getting used to a very different way of life, as Willie Riley, the farm manager, explained. Willie, a native of East St. Louis, grew up around the race tracks there and became a trainer for Mr. Entenmann back in 1985, but a few years ago gave up the hassle of traveling each day from Riverhead to Belmont or Aqueduct. Today, they have 15 horses of various breeds on the farm, some of whom are great attractions during the summer as they take visitors for a ride around the beautiful Martha Clara vineyards. There are also three other race horses currently in Florida who will be back up here on the farm soon.

David explained while completing his therapy ses-

David Sonatore gets assistance while massaging Glaciers End sion how he had become involved in this work. He grew up in horse country in New Jersey but it was not until he was in his mid-thirties, with a career as a film editor behind him, that he realized he had a very strong affinity for horses. He studied with Leslie Brannaman who, together with Tom Dorrence formed the factual basis for the fictional main character in Evan's novel. One of them told him, iA fellow like you should be doing something with horses,i so David took what was then a hobby and turned it into a career.

While racehorses are the stars of the horse world and also because they can more easily develop muscle problems due to spending so much time running the same way around a racetrack, David explained that most horses really benefit from massage therapy. He studied with the 'Equissage' program in Virginia and it was there that he met his first real test, a thoroughbred who instinctively knew that David had inward doubts about his ability to work with such a temperamental animal. The horse proceeded to take charge of the proceedings by really playing up. "It got to the stage that I just had to turn my back on him and walk away," David said. "It was then that the horse came up behind me and nuzzled me and from that moment on he would let me do anything to him. Horses originally were prey animals back in the wild and they still have a strong sense of anything that seems to them to be incongruous. My outward confidence but inward self-doubt upset the horse and it was only when I came into balance emotionally that he felt free to trust me. Horses see through our social masks and this is why they can also be such a great help in working with trauma victims of all types, whether they be physically challenged or survivors of domestic violence, something I was to make use of later on."

Desmond in Saratoga, one of the people with whom Nicholas Evans consulted before he wrote the best-selling novel and later smash hit film, The Horse Whisperer. David also learned the principles of that technique, although he is quick to point out that this is not truly his forte. He worked with Buck

Opera Of The Hamptons Returns Barrel

Egypt, Spain, Italy And Paris Come To The North Fork For A New Season

This summer, music lovers on the North Fork will not have to travel far to get a real taste of Europe and Egypt as the Opera of the Hamptons company brings its fourteenth season to eastern Long Island.

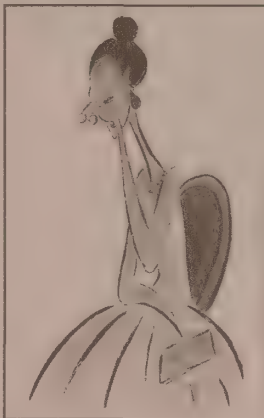

After opening in Westhampton at St. Mark's Church on Saturday May 21 at 5 pm. with a cast of internationally acclaimed artists performing music from Puccini to Gershwin and Rodgers and Hammerstein to Verdi in a wonderful program entitled iSummer is a Coming In! (surely a celebration of the end of what has been for most of us an overlong and very cold winter!), the focus moves to Cutchogue and the vineyards of Castello di Borghese where, on June 18 the company performs Verdi's Aida, a wonderful drama set in Pharonic Egypt, full of love, treachery, deception and, as with so many operas, a less than happy ending. But if you love happy endings, then come back to Borghese for the now almost traditional celebration of "From Opera to Broadway" on Saturday August 20, when patrons are encouraged to bring along their picnics and purchase a glass or two of some exceptional Borghese wine before the entertainment commences.

In between these, Opera of the Hamptons returns once more to the charming Vail-Leavitt

Theater in Riverhead, which proved such a wonderful venue for both artists and audience last year when glorious voices were heard in this bijou opera house for the first time in many many years. On Saturday July 16 the ever-loved Carmen will bring a touch of Spain, flamenco, bullfights and castanets and, of course, love and treachery. Then, on Saturday August 27 another famous Verdi opera, La Traviata, based on the famous Dumas novel La Dame aux Camelias, will transport us to the world of the courtesan and high society in 19th century Europe. By the way, neither of these have happy endings either!

Something new in this year's program will be a performance well after the end of the company's traditional season. Last year a straw poll taken during the performance at the Vail-Leavitt showed the audience strongly in favor of productions in the fall, so Opera of the Hamptons in response is staging a "Holiday Celebration" at the Vail-Leavitt on Saturday November 12. If this is successful, who knows, there could well be regular productions during the bleak winter months to lighten those dark days and to continue to bring the music of the gods into our hearts.

cent Malbec and one percent Petit Verdot. The nose is enchanting with faint plum aromas and vanilla while the palate offers more plum and dark berry flavors with smooth tannins and well-integrated oak providing structure. This wine is every bit as good as the previous vintage and may even prove better with additional bottle aging. The label no longer carries the name "young vines" because the vines are four years old now.

While the 2003 Merlot only spent ten months in French oak, the Shinn Estate Vineyards' 2002 "Six Barrel" Merlot ($34) spent a full twenty-two months in just six small French barrels, resulting in 151 cases of wine. Full-bodied and rich, the wine is ninety-two percent Merlot, five percent Cabernet Sauvignon and three percent field blend of Cabernet Franc, Malbec and Petite Verdot. Its nose shows much more than mere fruit and oak, offering a layered fusion of plums, berries, cinnamon, allspice, toasted oak. Full, round tannins balance similarly complex flavors in this generous, extravagant red. This is my favorite of the new releases and it has aging potential (likely up to ten years).

The Shinn Estate Vineyards tasting room is now open from noon to 5 p.m. on weekends but I recommend calling 804-0367 to reserve a spot in their vineyard tours (3 p.m. Saturdays and 1:30 p.m. Sundays). You'll spend half an hour walking through the vineyard with the owners and then head to their beautifully rustic tasting room to sample wines. For more information, visit .

Therapy (continued from page 49)

therapy brought David to study in Arizona with Linda Kohanov, a leading exponent of using horses in personal therapy sessions and he also is studying to obtain his MSW qualification. He is currently in discussions aimed at setting up a clinic on the North Shore, where conventional horse massaging will run side by side with personal therapy.

I must admit to not really being a horse person, frankly, although they are lovely and graceful, they are very large and unpredictable and I noticed that even with his expertise, David wore a set of baseball catchers shin guards (the result of some painful experiences in the past, I gathered).

Horses have been man's closest animal associates almost since the beginning of civilization. They carried warriors into battle, they carried loads of cargo, they were used to till fields and were the prime form of travel. As David pointed out, it is still within living memory that horses did all these things, so perhaps it is no surprise that there still are people like David Sonatore, the Horse Massager who makes horses feel better and who also works with them to help people overcome their difficulties.

Anyone wishing to learn more about horse massage or therapy with horses should call David at 908-415-2737 or visit Linda Kohanov's web site www.taofequus.com.

Guy de Fraumeni's Hollywood In The Hamptons

Movies made where? Does it matter? Dan's Papers' They Made The Movies Here Film Festival, which I (ahem) humbly host, features Island cultivated motion pictures and we're darn proud of 'em. The new "political" thriller The Interpreter is shot in New York City and specifically in the United Nations building on First Avenue and 44th Street with such love and adoration for the locations, they are drawn very, very close to us. So close, I'd like to adopt it as one of ours. And, more, one of our Movies Made Here "regulars," Patria Pacis, appears in the film, starring Nicole Kidman and Sean Penn and, of course, the soaring architecture of the U.N. building itself, erected in a time of peace-seeking willingness. At its best, The Interpreter speaks to that end, however, in this time of "Shoot First" oppressiveness, the moviemakers are lucky to get a hint of that spoken of commercially.

Very few besides Pollack, Sydney not Jackson, could have painted such an affectionate picture of New York City. That's because he has a New York frame of mind, in spite of being one of Hollywood's best crisp and compelling directors with a longing for elegance. The Interpreter has all that, as did The Firm and Three Days of the Condor. The plot and intricate, speechified scripting is something else again. It reflects its tortuous years of rewriting following actual events that tripped up its current events of intrigue-spooked plotting. There were too, too many real acts of corruption and violence to keep ahead of them, let alone keep up with them.

The center of the film's drama is the ruler of a fictional African country. The leader, portrayed by Earl Cameron, was a glorified liberator who quickly degenerated to a genocidal monster. He is despised by all; even the U.S. government agrees with France and the U.N. that he must be stopped. At this point, you are to move your butt to the uncomfortable edge of your seat and hold tight. A U.N. interpreter has returned late to the offices to pick up her African flutes and overhears shocking plans to assassinate the despot when he arrives to make a speech. What's a girl (who can speak dozens of languages and play primitive flutes) to do — especially if she is native to the gangster dictator's country and looks like an overly blond Hollywood star?

Of course, the interpreter is Nicole Kidman. Who else could satisfy Mr. Pollack's penchant for elegance and be able to roll off her talented tongue yet another obscure dialect? Fortunately for world harmony, the director had the good sense to get Sean Penn as a Federal Agent assigned to protect the interpreter and possibly upset the planned killing.

Supplied with yards of background tough times and tragedy, Mr. Penn gives a broiling good and subtle performance. And, get this: you won't be able to ignore Catherine Keener's ability in her abbreviated role as Penn's FBI sidekick. Together, they add a whole row of U.N. assembly strength to the propped-up shakiness of all the back stories supplied to the characters.

Do you think the death of Agent Penn's wife was applied to get something going between the blond star and the pained faced investigator who is as attracted to her as he is suspicious? There is something awfully fishy about her. Is it because she's been a political activist in the oppressive leader's land? And, who on earth would want to harm that gorgeous fair-haired head? Which takes us to another star of The Interpreter. It is the cinematographer Darius Khondji, who's made Ms. Kidman more lovely and made the city and its U.N. World Headquarters something to hold dear. Sydney Pollack is credited for at least taking a shot at political relevance. He has also been a darn good producer and an actor. You've seen him lots. He's the one who looks like a cracker jack used car salesman.

Guy Jean de Fraumeni is the producer / writer / director of award-winning European and American feature films. He has been a judge at major film and TV award competitions, including the Oscars, the Emmys and various film festivals. He is assisted by Sarah Halsey.

theatre review: the light in the piazza...by gordin & christianano

An adventure awaits you at the Vivian Beaumont Theater, where the Lincoln Center production of Adam Guettel's new musical The Light in the Piazza will transport you to Italy during the summer of 1953. The recipient of 11 Drama Desk nominations including one for Best New Musical, the show, with a book by Craig Lucas (Reckless) and as directed by Bartlett Sher, is a serious story with heart about real people, dealing with delicate human emotions, a rarity amongst musicals today. Although not perfect, it's an illuminating tale with sophisticated music that actually makes a sincere attempt to move and enlighten us.

The book by Mr. Lucas, who is well known for his witty off-beat tales, is based on a 1960 novella by Elizabeth Spencer that was made into a 1962 film that I remember most notably for a luminous Yvette Mimieux.

The story focuses on two women from North Carolina: a mother, Margaret Johnson (Victoria Clark), and her 26-year-old daughter Clara (Kelli O'Hara), as they travel through Italy, where Margaret had honeymooned with her husband Roy, who is absent on this trip. While in Florence, Clara's hat is blown away by a sudden gust of wind and, as fate would have it, into the hands of handsome 20-year-old Italian Fabrizio (Matthew Morrison), who speaks no English. Clara speaks not a word of Italian, but the two fall in love at first sight.

The tale is ultimately Margaret's journey as she struggles with the hidden truth that when Clara was 10, she was struck in the head by a pony, and doctors have said that the blow has stunted her emotional and intellectual development. Clara has the mind of a child in the body of a woman, but the problem is not obvious, especially to an Italian who doesn't speak English.

Fabrizio is the youngest son of Signor Naccarelli (Mark Harelik), a successful Florentine haberdasher. His family – which consists of his loving wife (Patti Cohenour), his elder philandering son Giuseppe (Michael Berresse) and Giuseppe's forlorn wife Franca (Sarah Uriarte Berry) – unaware of Clara's handicap, becomes enchanted with her. Margaret, realizing the possible complications from a marriage between her daughter and their son, attempts to enlighten them, but ultimately fails. Instead, she takes Clara off to Rome only to return to Florence, where the two young lovers become engaged.

Victoria Clark as the pragmatic Margaret, who secretly longs for Clara to have a chance at happiness, delivers a finely etched complex performance that is stunningly affecting, without being sentimental. Her singing is breathtaking. Two of her songs, "Dividing Day" and the finale "Fable" are heartbreakingly beautiful. Her performance is simply amazing and a joy to behold. I was in awe.

Kelli O'Hara is lovely as Clara and has a beautiful soprano voice. The character as written and directed, however, doesn't seem as backward as indicated, which gives credence to the possibility that the doctors were wrong and Clara's lack of development could be due to overprotective parents.

The entire cast is outstanding. They are accomplished singers as well as impressive actors. Matthew Morrison makes for a wonderfully romantic and impulsive lover. Mark Harelik as his father is strong and charming. His duet, "Let's Walk," with Ms. Clark, is a surefire hit.

The music by Adam Guettel, a grandson of Richard Rogers, is sumptuous, tending toward operatic and performed by a full orchestra with a cello, harp, guitar and mandolin adding richness and flavor. It is lovely to listen to, but contributes little in the way of strong dramatic impact. His lyrics for the most part are less successful, but he is clearly a gifted composer. I suspect there are more memorable scores in his future and his work here may even be the finest this season.

Bartlett Sher's production is an elegant work of art. The stunning sets by Michael Yeargan are the best use of the space I have ever seen in the Vivian Beaumont. The lighting by Christopher Akerlind gives a rich, romantic feel while adding to the imposing reality of the sets. Catherine Zuber's period costumes are fabulous.

How refreshing: The Light in the Piazza is an original musical with heart about real people. No gimmicks here, just the real thing.

The Light in the Piazza opened at the Vivian Beaumont Theatre 150 West 65th Street on April 18, 2005. Tickets are available at the Lincoln Center box office, by calling Tele-charge at 212-239-6200 or by visiting www.lct.org

review: sundarian string quartet

People misunderstand evolution and fitness. "Evolve or perish!" and similar slogans are all too common. Tell that to a shark – quick, before it eats you! Sharks, horseshoe crabs, ferns, some bacteria and fungi which will survive beyond humanity, as well as string quartets, are elegant, old solutions that still succeed. Variation and selection only means "Make the cut!" now, even if the variation developed epochs ago. I still perform on my Grandpa's 1929 violin – runs good, thank you – when was the last time you had hardware or software trouble?

The Sundarian String Quartet has admirably proven its fitness and the fitness of the form in an auspicious first Sunday Series Concert in Christ Episcopal Church, Sag Harbor. Though the fine weather was tempting, I'm glad I chose the finer environment indoors where I enjoyed an utterly satisfying afternoon. The program opened with Mozart's String Quartet K. 421, in D minor. From the first hushed sotto voce to the final phrase, sumptuously understated, the quartet irresistibly lured the listeners with perfectly blended, warm, welcoming sound quality. The piece itself is a little uncommon for Mozart, with more time in minor mode and a surprising prevalence of melodic octaves; less of the famous giggle, more of bittersweet perspective, noble pathos. The quartet gave these challenges a mature, perfectly-paced reading: never hurried, never too indulgent. Violinist Anne Rabbat played first violin in the Mozart where the quartet as a whole, but especially Ms. Rabbat, graced every note with an integrity of luscious length – even the crispest staccatos were singing – and everything flowed seemingly effortlessly.

The only other piece on the program was the String Quartet Op. 95, F minor, by Beethoven. The violinists traded seats for the Beethoven, an equitable practice I appreciate for the players' sake and for the edifying opportunity to hear different players and instruments under the same acoustic conditions. Thus, the Beethoven was ably led by the agile, athletic violinist Jonathan Chu, and again the scintillating balance was fabulous throughout. The only exception to the fine balance, made more obvious by the Beethoven piece, was the cello sound, from which I wanted often a little more kick and clarity (I suspect this is more a matter of instrument than of instrumentalist).

The players displayed, in general, a stunning unity of style. Interpretations were unanimous, every curve of phrase well-turned and polished – no ragged ends or inexplicable vibratos as I so often hear in younger quartets. Their resonance of unbowed finger was delicious, not only at the obvious movement ends, but at the ending of every unison chord, every single phrase, throughout the afternoon. Melodic unisons positively bloomed, always a credit to the lower parts, here carried by Youming Chen, viola, and Caitlin Sullivan, cello.

The audience nearly filled the house, and it responded heartily with strong, sustained applause and some hollers. I overheard many exclamations such as "Nothing like live performance!" and "Better than my recordings!" These comments are clichés and are all too often not true, but this first Sunday Series Concert at Christ Episcopal Church in Sag Harbor did the job. The building is beautiful inside, and the acoustic is so superb for string chamber music that even these familiar works were a constantly fresh revelation. The program was perhaps too short. One member of the quartet sports Astor Piazzola arrangements among his credentials – let's hear a tango! Great players in a great acoustic, side-by-side with familiar compositions, offer a great opportunity to let people really hear newer music as well as old, and this opportunity slipped by. One power that makes the old string quartet form thrive is its ability to do new things. Congratulations to series producers Stacey Dermont and Dr. Daniel Koontz, and thanks also for the illuminating spoken program comments (another concert practice I appreciate) from the church's Music Director Dr. Koontz. The next concert in the series features the Sunnyland Jazz Band, Sunday, June 26, 2005 at 2 p.m. Outdoors with Strawberry Festival! Call the church office at (631) 725-0128 for tickets or more info.

THE DAN'S PAPERS THEY MADE THE MOVIE HERE FILM FESTIVAL

COMPROMISING POSITIONS

Where is Movie Hampton? These days it is located at the Ross School's Lecture Hall where Dan's Papers' They Made Movies Here FREE Film Festival presents some of our Island's best products – movies kinda' home grown and good for you. This Saturday, May 7th at 2 p.m. we'll feature a funny-as-heck, thrilling-drilling mystery, Compromising Positions, about dentistry gone promiscuous and deadly. It's the dandy, handy-work of novelist Susan Isaacs, a long time East End resident. The exterior scenes were shot on the North Shore of Nassau County and the interiors and their neighborhoods in East Hampton, where the producer/director Frank Perry lived for many years. Mr. Perry is probably best known for directing the small, independent 1963 film, David and Lisa and Last Summer. They had meaningful dramatic impact and this lighthearted spoof of a murder mystery will have you as jumpy as an impacted wisdom tooth. I am your host, Guy de Fraumeni, and I'll be there with Sarah Halsey to jaw about the movie. Lots of refreshments will get your mouth feeling real good, too.

Compromising Positions was made in 1985 and stars Susan Sarandon, who was terrific then and just gets better. It is partly a light, titillating, funny kind of OP-ED piece on male chauvinism, pornography, ethics and vulnerable housewives, and it is also a somewhat chewy black comedy. Then it is very funny. Compromising Positions are primarily those that a number of Long Island women find themselves in, in the dentist's chair of the top periodontist, Dr. Bruce Fleckstein, who is a low down womanizer. He flashes a huge pinky ring and coos and woos them in a reclining chair, seducing them into brushing their teeth frequently and flossing and using a water pic daily..... hygienically revising and cleaning up the meaning of the term oral sex. I am sure eventually he would have had stirrups installed on his warm steel chair, but someone plunges a scalpel into his neck and this plunges Susan Sarandon into a murder mystery. The investigations reveal that Dr. Fleckstein had gotten many of his patients to go as far as a motel room and there he recorded their precious moments with Polaroids of the women in the fashion of Larry Flint's "Hustler" magazine.

Ms. Sarandon, as one of the very few less gullible patients, gets the chance to get back to investigative reporting and she can go where the police detective, smoothly played by Raul Julia, can't. She goes to the hearts of the implicated women. Some of the women are incisor sharp and others are as dumb as that impacted wisdom tooth, but all had been taken in. Mary Beth Hurt, Annie DeSalvo and Peg Tuccio play a few of them. Judith Ivey as Ms. Sarandon's best friend, who did not need any of the dentist's services, has the best dialogue, written by Susan Isaacs (probably amidst the trees on her Sagaponack property).

Production Design was by Peter Larkin and Cinematography by Barry Sonnenfeld, another Hamptons local, who can be seen smiling a lot behind a big cigar since he directed the best seller movies Get Shorty and Men in Black. Everyone did very tidy work in this movie, almost antiseptic, as if it was rinsed with Listerine. You'll have a bright smile.

Guy Jean de Fraumeni is the producer/writer/director of award-winning European and American feature films. He has been a judge at major film and TV award competitions, including the Oscars, the Emmys and various film festivals.

ART COMMENTARY With Marion Wolberg Weiss

GUILD HALL MEMBER'S SHOW

It gets more and more difficult with each passing year to give the Guild Hall Member's Show its due, primarily because there are so many good works on display. It becomes impossible to critique such a wide assortment; after all, there's just so much newspaper space available.

Therefore, this critic has selected pieces where material conveys theme or intention, realizing that there are many other deserving pieces that are not included.

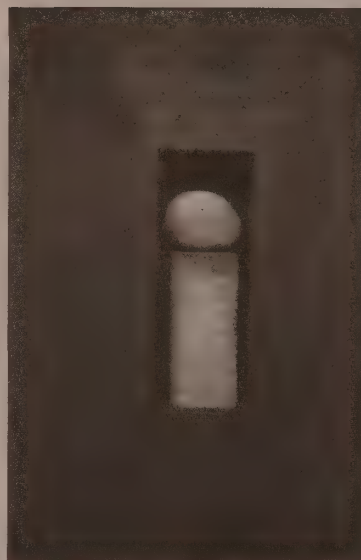

Christa Maiwald's "Best Representational" work uses embroidery to make a point, although it's not as precise as in previous works featuring female teenage angst. This time, the male subject presents a contradiction to the idea that embroidery is a woman's "thing." The female's ability to nurture, however, is still present as the man is being fed from a spoon by some unseen entity.

Marie Russo's "Wall Series #2" employs plaster to give aesthetic weight to her abstract boat imagery, the medium signifying strength and durability.

Faith Dorian Wright's "The Envelope - 1912" also suggests durability through the past, via the technique of collage. There's also a kind of gentility that offsets strength in Ms. Wright's signature work.

Rima Mardoyan's "Best in Show" piece uses beeswax to create an arresting abstract where a slick surface belies the painterly, textured images. Carolyn Conrad's digital "Honorable Mention" photograph conveys material in a unique fashion, the subject itself capturing a group of clay chairs and shoes. There's a recollection of the past and objects seen out of context, which make the work somewhat surrealist.

Ellen Frank's "Hanukkah Illuminated: A Book of Days"

Work by Margaret Kerr, 2005

proves that content equals form in her employment of Egyptian papyrus, an ancient writing material that reinforces the artist's subject matter.

Margaret Kerr's brick, wood and brick dust work is also an homage to the distant past, one that celebrates archetypal shapes.

Clair Watson's "Neither and Both" presents found objects in the form of pink leather gloves hanging from a bar. The leather is an unusual material not often employed, and we welcome its appearance, proving that everyday items can have intrinsic beauty.

The current exhibit will be on view at East Hampton's Guild Hall until May 21.

HONORING THE ARTIST: KEN ROBBINS

Much has been written about Jackson Pollock's home. And while many photographs have also been taken of the locale, including this week's cover, none is quite like Ken Robbins' version.

Mr. Robbins has a particular penchant for local landscape that is at once familiar and magical: natural and unnatural. It's easy (especially for yours truly) to find similarities between Mr. Robbins' world and ones created by filmmakers like Fellini, whom he admires very much. Except, as Mr. Robbins quickly notes, people don't inhabit his landscapes like they do Fellini's images.

Other cinematic images have previously come to mind when this critic has studied Mr. Robbins' photographs, his light and shadows forming distinct compositions reminiscent of John Ford's The Searchers.

It's difficult to "typecast" Mr. Robbins' style, so to speak, although he has made it clear he isn't a big fan of Abstract Expressionism. Even so, there are traces of Expressionism in his sharp contrasts between blacks and whites and his passionate imagery. We would also guess that Mr. Robbins wouldn't consider himself a realist either. There's too much manipulation in his landscape. Which brings up a salient question for this critic: Can photography or film ever capture reality as it exists in nature?

The answer does not primarily concern Mr. Robbins, however. While it's true that he does "capture nature," he does so in a manipulated way, thus conveying what he feels and thinks. His photographs are indeed his medium of personal expression.

We continue trying to label Mr. Robbins' style. Is it Romanticism, since he's said he's attracted to the Hudson River School? We can certainly see its influences in his photographs.

Yet it is Mr. Robbins himself who suggests that his work be considered "erotic," noting that "Art eroticizes whatever it is." He does admit, however, that he's photographed some pretty ugly, non-erotic images in his cross-country trips, including automobile graveyards.

Perhaps we shouldn't try so hard to determine Mr. Robbins' style. After all, his objective is what's most important. Putting it in his own words, therefore, the photographer explains that "I'm saying to people, wait a second. Look at this. Look at this image from my perspective. Andy Warhol was saying this when he photographed soup cans."

Even so, Mr. Robbins' goals don't stop with the photographic image; he also writes children's books, using his own pictures. What's a surprise is that the books feature scientific subjects, like his Earth, Air, Fire and Water, yet they still have a connection to Mr. Robbins' primary pursuit: nature.

While nature can be found anywhere on earth and Mr. Robbins admits he'd like to visit the Far North and Scandinavia, he also says, "Everything I need is right here at home."

—Marion Wolberg Weiss

Mr. Robbins will be having an exhibit at Pamela Williams Gallery in Amagansett, opening Saturday, May 7. His work can also be seen on his website: kenrobbinsphoto.com

Away At School...By DAVID LION RATTINER

Still an Idiot

For some reason, I thought that on the day of graduation I would change in some dramatic way, but it has come to my attention that I am still my idiotic self. I graduated Northeastern University last weekend and am really excited to be a college graduate. But when graduation was over I assumed that all of the stupid things that I did when I was a college kid would stop happening. Well, I couldn't have been more wrong.

Two days after graduation, I woke up feeling exhilarated. This was it, I said to myself, today is the official day that I no longer am in college. I glanced over at my clock, which read one in the afternoon. Suddenly, my cell phone rang. It was my friend Peter who just finished up the semester as well, but still has another year of college to go.

"Dave, it's Pete."

"Yeah Pete I know it's you, what's up?"

"Dude, you graduated! You have to come over and celebrate. I called up Stephanie (Pete's girlfriend) and she is coming over, you want to come?"

"Alright man that sounds good, what do you want to do?"

"I'm thinking that we cook some burgers and grab some beers. Come over in an hour."

"Alright I'll be there soon."

I felt kind of weird getting out of bed at one in the afternoon to simply walk to my friend's house and have dinner. Am I really going to make this my whole day? I shook my head, still groggy from last night and hopped in the shower. An hour later I was at Peter's door. He seemed really excited to cook some food. "Come on, man, we got to get to the grocery store!"

Peter's energy was infectious as we waltzed to the supermarket down the street. We were like cavemen hunting for the day's feast. We bought the beer and burgers, got back to the apartment, fired up the burgers and cracked open some beers. I was in the living room while Peter was cooking away in the kitchen. It was at that moment my cell phone rang once again. It was my girlfriend wondering where I was. After briefly explaining, I invited her over the apartment. Pete wouldn't mind. About fifteen minutes later my cell phone rang again. It was my girlfriend once again, telling me that she was downstairs.

I jumped off the couch and raced outside the apartment, noticing that Peter was no longer in the kitchen. Must be in the bathroom, I thought to myself, as I headed downstairs. Sure enough, my girlfriend was waiting for me. With a big grin, I dragged her into the building and walked her up the stairs back towards the apartment. When the two of us got to the hall, I noticed that Peter was also in the hallway along with another person, Pete's girlfriend. He was knocking on his own apartment door. Uh oh, I thought to myself.

"Dave! Dave! Open up the door, man!" Pete was pounding away at the door. He thinks that I am inside the apartment.

"Pete, I'm down the hall, just open the door."

"Dude, what the hell are you doing outside the apartment? Oh my God, the burgers are still cooking in there and I don't have my keys! Why did you leave the apartment?"

"I walked out to get my girlfriend! Why did you leave?"

"I left to get my girlfriend too! Now what are we going to do? The burgers are going to burn."

Both our girlfriends looked at us like we were idiots and said simultaneously, "THE STOVE IS STILL ON YOU HAVE TO DO SOMETHING!"

Pete and I looked at each other, both realizing the danger. Our girlfriends were right, this could cause a fire. We started shoving one another trying to provoke ideas out of one another. What were we going to do? The keys are inside and we can't get in. Suddenly, we got the idea to call Pete's roommate and run to get the keys from him. Pete got on his cell phone and called his roommate who was at work about a mile away from the apartment. After a quick explanation, Peter and I ran out the door full throttle.

On the way out the door, I said this to Peter. "Pete, I may be a graduate, but we are definitely still idiots."

When In Manhattan...BY OLIVER PETERSON

Empire State Building: 1,454 Feet of Fun

One of the most recognizable and enduring landmarks of New York City and perhaps the United States and the world, the Empire State Building is once again the tallest in Manhattan. Towering over a quarter-mile into the sky, it is one of the premier tourist attractions in the city. For most of us on the East End, the edifice is a common part of the view from traffic heading west on the 495. Ever since I was a kid returning home on Sunday nights from weekends in East Hampton, the lights of the Empire State Building provided gridlock entertainment. For July 4th, they were red, white and blue. For Christmas, red and green. Even the fall had an illuminated hue of its own - nice shades of red and yellow maybe? You get the idea. Still today, when I visit the city from our island I now call home, I can't help but venture a guess as to the color around exit 34 on the LIE and wait to see if I'm right. I'm sure there are some of you that can relate. The building is as much a part of the city as the concrete and the rivers and the dirt.

Erected during the Depression, beginning on March 17, 1930, from 60,000 tons of steel, the building was part of a great competition between the Chrysler Corporation's Walter Chrysler and the creator of General Motors, Jakob Raskob. The two men flooded their money into the projects of the Empire State Building and the Chrysler Building in an effort to see who could build the tallest building. Under the direction of architect William Lamb of Shreve, Lamb, and Harmon, the steel frame of the Empire State Building climbed about four-and-a-half floors a week. Metal strips separated the windows from the stone columns, and the posts, beams, windows, and frames were fabricated in factories before being put up on site to speed construction. The strips wrapped the stone edges to allow for minimal cutting and fitting. Time was of the essence. Stonework began in June, was completed in November, and by October of 1930, 88 of the 102 floors were completed. The final 14 became the signature 200-foot tower of glass, steel and aluminum that defines the building today. Needless to say, Raskob defeated Chrysler, though Chrysler's building remains a close second. It is arguably more beautiful, with its Nouveau style and the seven-story steel-faced pinnacle. In fact, Chrysler finished construction first and very briefly held the title for tallest building before the Empire State was completed.

From 1931 until today, the building has been called an "Ambassador to New York" to the world's most powerful and famous politicians and entertainers. Visitors have included Fidel Castro, Queen Elizabeth, Prince Charles, Prince Andrew, The Duchess of York, Nikita Krushchev, the King of Siam, Tom Cruise, KISS, Ronald McDonald and others. But we regular folks can go there too. The skyscraper has a number of businesses and attractions inside. The most famous of all is the observatory. If you have the constitution to handle long lines and tight crowds, especially on weekends, the view of New York from the 86th floor is necessary for any true New Yorker. Someone once said, "You can live in New York all your life, but until you see it from the top of the Empire State Building, you haven't seen the city." It's true. If the view's not enough and you get bored, please don't test those "penny from the top" theories. Instead, check out one of the many shops and restaurants throughout. If you're sleepy, you can pay for a nap at MetroNaps, the suite on the 24th floor where suckers can shell out $14 for a 20-minute snooze in an adjustable ergonomic chair. Or, if you really want to go nuts, rent a sleep pod for installation in your office. Only in New York, folks.

The Empire State building has 1,860 steps. It was the setting for Sleepless in Seattle, King Kong, When Harry Met Sally, and An Affair to Remember. It took 7 million man-hours to build, and cost $40,948,900 (including land). It weighs 365,000 tons, and is 37 million cubic feet in volume. It is ubiquitous but unforgettable. It's located at 350 5th Avenue. You are welcome day or night.

The third and last XK series of motorcars was the 150 model. Looking basically the same but with a lit-

However, many hours of enjoyment were spent behind that 150 S engine because it was the same engine that powered the original 1961 XK-E. Like the 1949 XK-120 blew away the public at the London Motor Car show when it was first shown, so did the XKE. The E type, as it was called in England, had a technically advanced chassis with a beautifully designed independent rear suspension with inboard disc brakes. This rocket ship outclassed the earlier car in every way: long lowered snout, glass enclosed headlights, racing bucket seats, a dashboard that resembled a Spitfire fighter plane's, and that wonderfully powerful, polished 265 horsepower big six powerplant.

Silvia Lehrer's Cooking Column

It's a special card, or breakfast in bed or the gorgeous floral bouquet. It's Mother's Day. And it's pay-back time for all those days of "Mom" food that sustained us.

While Mother's Day is probably the most popular dining out day of the year, according to statistics, there is nothing like the gathering of the clan at home. Provided, of course, that mom isn't at the stove. Innovative salads can be a simple answer to entertaining mom on Mother's Day.

Start with a simple salad appetizer of smoked salmon topped with horseradish sauce on endive spears. This savory appetizer was inspired by Kevin Penner, executive chef of 1770 House in East Hampton. "Bob" Cobb salad has just about everything in it but the kitchen sink – a variety of greens, poached chicken, crisp bacon, hard cooked eggs, tomatoes, cheese, avocado and a piquant vinaigrette. The salad isn't just tossed together but developed into a composition of stripes of ingredients like an American flag. Back in the 20s, Robert H. "Bob" Cobb, president of the Brown Derby Corporation, got hungry one day and chopped up whatever was around at the Brown Derby Restaurant to counter the hamburger and steak usually served there. A healthy choice – and healthy food choices are happily being made in many a household today.

A fun and sweetly delicious fruit salad dessert, pineapple and banana kabobs in caramel sauce, will surely get a big smile from mom. Have a Happy Mother's Day.

ENDIVE AND SMOKED SALMON WITH HORSERADISH SAUCE

This winning hors d'oeuvre was inspired by executive chef Kevin Penner of 1770 House, East Hampton. Simply spoon a little horseradish sauce on an endive leaf and top with a square of smoked salmon – the best that you can buy – of course!

Makes up to 24 spears

For the horseradish sauce

1/3 cup high-quality prepared horseradish
1/4 cup crème fraîche or sour cream
2 tablespoons unsalted butter, softened
Freshly ground white pepper to taste

For the hors d'oeuvres

1 large endive
1/4 pound smoked salmon or Nova Scotia salmon, sliced paper thin
2 teaspoons minced chives

1. Combine the ingredients for the horseradish sauce in a mixing bowl and whisk until smooth. Can be prepared up to 2 days ahead and refrigerated in a suitable container.

2. When ready to serve, pull endive spears from the center core and place on a counter. Cut smoked salmon into 1-inch squares. Place a scant teaspoon of horseradish sauce at the wide end of each endive and top with a square of salmon. Sprinkle chives on the salmon and arrange spears in a circle on a serving platter up to an hour or so before serving.

"BOB" COBB SALAD

I wrote this recipe down on the back of a paper instructing me how to prepare my newborn baby's formula. I'm a grandmother now – enough said.

Serves 6-8

For the dressing

2 cloves garlic, finely chopped
1/4 cup red wine vinegar
2 teaspoons lemon juice
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
1/2 teaspoon dry English mustard
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper
1/3 cup extra-virgin olive oil mixed with 3 tablespoons Canola oil

For the salad

1 head Romaine, washed and spin-dried
1 head chicory, washed and spin-dried
1 bunch watercress, washed and spin-dried, heavy stems discarded
1 whole poached chicken breast*
6-8 strips crisply cooked bacon, crumbled
2-3 diced fresh tomatoes
1/2 cup crumbled blue cheese
2-3 hard-cooked egg, chopped coarsely
1/4 cup mixed chopped flat-leaf parsley and snipped chives
1 ripe avocado, cut into wedges

1. Prepare the dressing. Put the minced garlic in a mixing bowl. Whisk in the vinegar, lemon juice, Worcestershire sauce, English mustard, salt and pepper to taste and stir to mix. Slowly whisk in the combined oils until mixture is homogenous. Taste to adjust seasoning.

2. Tear the romaine lettuce into large pieces and arrange at base of a large rectangular serving platter. Top with torn chicory and watercress leaves. Cut chicken into thin strips and center over the lettuce in a long stripe. Arrange the crumbled bacon on either side of the chicken and follow with stripes of diced tomatoes, cheese and chopped egg sans avocado. Sprinkle with parsley and chives. The platter can be prepared ahead, covered with a tent of plastic wrap and refrigerated. Bring to room temperature before serving.

3. When ready to serve, border the platter with wedges of avocado, drizzle over the dressing and serve buffet style.

*Prepare Court Bouillon (about 1 quart seasoned water) with a bit of carrot, celery, onion, paprika, salt and peppercorns. Bring to a boil and simmer for 25 minutes. Put in chicken breast and poach gently for 20 minutes with cover ajar. Cool and discard skin, bones and excess fat.

PINEAPPLE AND BANANA KABOB

A delicious fruit salad dessert

Makes 8 servings

1 ripe pineapple, peeled, cored and cut into 1-inch cubes
4 bananas cut into 1-inch cubes
8 wooden skewers
1 cup plus 1 tablespoon sugar
4 tablespoons unsalted butter
1/4 cup dark rum
1 cup crème fraîche
1 teaspoon vanilla

1. To make the kabobs, slide a wooden skewer through the center of each pineapple and banana cubes, alternating pineapple and banana cubes.

2. Put 1 cup sugar in a large, 12-inch stainless skillet and cook over medium-high heat until sugar melts and caramelizes to a deep amber color; do not stir. Watch this procedure, being careful not to burn the sugar. Remove from heat and, holding the pan away from you, stir in the butter. (Caramel is very hot and may spatter.) When the butter is incorporated, return the caramel over medium heat and put in the kabobs. Simmer for 5 minutes on each side, turning once. Add the rum, stir into the caramel and turn off the heat. Can be prepared up to several hours ahead. The caramel will harden if doing ahead. Shake the pan with the kabobs over gentle heat to liquefy the sauce.

3. Place the crème fraîche in a bowl and stir in the remaining sugar and the vanilla. Whisk gently to incorporate.

4. Place 1 kabob on each plate and spoon over the rum sauce. Top with a dollop of crème fraîche and serve.

Dining in the Hamptons

Il Mare (which means "the sea" in Italian) Ristorante is a lovely dining destination located in the Montauk Yacht Club. From the moment you enter the grand foyer that leads to the restaurant, a sense of elegant old-world charm sets the tone.

Upon our arrival, Il Mare's Maitre d', Alessandro Balgera, greeted us near the club's spacious bar area where many patrons gather for a cocktail before or after their meal. Alessandro escorted us to one of the many comfy tables that boast spectacular views. In fact, after we were seated, I decided to play a bit of musical chairs, and moved my seat to get a closer view of the opposite side of the marina.

The dining room is decorated in a crisp, clean style. The use of white linens on the tables and the wood and frosted glass cathedral-like ceilings, enhance the openness of the room, while soft, sultry music is played in the background.

A warm basket of crisp bread was immediately delivered. Our waiter, Patrick, showed us the extensive wine list (which is comprised of mostly Italian wines, in addition to some French, California, and local). My friend Trenny and I both decided on the Principato Cabernet. I usually drink Chardonnay, but I decided to pair my food with something more suitable for the Italian cuisine I was about to indulge in.

The menu is written in Italian, but luckily for us the translation was offered as well. Before we made a decision, we had a few questions about the ingredients and preparation, and after Alessandro explained them in detail, there would be no wavering.

For starters, I ordered the Insalata Verde Novella, Julienne di Cetrioli, Pomodori, Cipolle Rosse, Peperoni Arrosto, Noci Tostate, Gorgonzola Aromatizzata con

una Vinaigrette alle Erbe e Aglio. Wow, what a mouthful. Translation = iceberg lettuce with dressing. I'm just kidding! I don't want to insult Chef de Cuisine Marco Riva, but I couldn't resist the opportunity for a good laugh. This delightful summery fresh crisp salad was nothing to chuckle at. The presentation was a beautiful composition with a hint of color to create an artistic treat. The crisp mix of Mediterranean lettuce tossed with julienne cucumbers, red onions, roasted peppers, toasted walnuts and Gorgonzola cheese dressed in a delicate herb and garlic vinaigrette was divine and refreshing.

After our palates were cooled, we were ready to share the warm Cestino di Polenta con Funghi Porcini Formaggio d'Alpeggio e Insalata Novella. An adorable cup-like creation made of Polenta was filled to the brim with a smooth, silky combination of sautéed Porcini mushrooms and Taleggio fondue served with mixed greens. Anticipation grew as we broke apart the Polenta cup to dig in. And, we weren't disappointed.

The Polenta and mushroom-cheese complemented the other perfectly.

After we finished our first courses, we had time to sip on more wine, catch up on the latest girl-talk (always very exciting), and chat a bit with Alessandro (who originally hails from Rome, and most recently moved here from Indonesia,) about life, relationships (don't ever say the "M" word to him – he will break out in an allergic rash), and of course, food.

Before we could continue further into the depths of why Men Are from Mars, Women are from Venus, our main courses appeared. Trenny had decided on the Filet wrapped in bacon paired with a mushroom and Taleggio cheese sauce (similar to that of the Polenta mushroom cup), accompanied by a marinated tomato. The smoky taste of bacon layered the flavoring with each mouthful and added an extra marinade that cooked through the tender filet, which melted in our mouths. My Mediterranean Sea Bass was baked in foil with a sun-dried tomato sauce made with chunks of fresh tangy tomatoes mixed with capers and olives. The lightness of the fish was the perfect marriage when paired with the robustness of the tomato mixture (sorry to use the "M" word, Alessandro), but when it works, it really works.

As we neared the end of our meal, we could not imagine eating another morsel of food. But, thanks to Patrick and Alessandro's tempting endorsement of the dessert menu, we took a leap of faith and decided to share not one, not two, but three decadent desserts.

It was a warm dish of mixed berries prepared in a pastry cream mixture with a caramelized sugar top, a creamy Pancetta and Tiramisu that completed our meals. Heavenly!

Chef Marco Riva has really outdone himself by creating a menu that offers much more than your traditional Italian standards. His influences from France, Austria and Germany allow him to create Italian cuisine prepared with the best variety of international flavors.

Il Mare offers an exquisite dining experience. Until next time, as they would say in Italy, Arrivederci!

The Garden At Rock Cottage by Lance Brilliantine

Catch Spring While You Can!

Everyone loves springtime! When you consider that we probably experience fewer than a hundred springs in a lifetime, it makes sense to maximize the ones we have. What a great fantasy to think, having wealth and time, we might set about traveling south and north and double the number of springs we experience?

Of course, the End End of Long Island is a great place to adopt a carpe diem spirit during spring, and cram more into less. The environment itself – one that provides cold winters and wet springs – seems to maximize spring flowers. While spring bulbs have already waned in New York City, the Hamptons are in full bloom!

One of the simplest and best ways to enjoy all that spring offers is to take a drive up and down some of the streets and roads. There are many avid gardeners on the East End, and at this time of year magnolia, flowering cherry, sagg, and other native species are in bloom. Personally, I love the contrast of wild, flowering trees dotting reserves and wooded areas; the contrast of white, mauve, and pink against brown trunks and ground is enthralling.

During late April and May, the Hamptons are redolent with hyacinths, daffodils, tulips, and other spring bulbs that are bursting forth with renewed energy. Spring grass and budding trees, with their new-green color, are a joy to see.

I am constantly on the lookout for new ideas and plants to include in the garden. This is an exciting time of year because of the variety of plants available. Some of the local nurseries offer great places to take a stroll and see some beautiful plants. It is fun to explore the displays and to learn about some of the more unusual plants. Visits to Marder's, Bayberry,

Fritillaria

Lynch's, and Wittendale's are never a disappointment.

In East Hampton, LongHouse Reserve opened to members and the public on Saturday, April 30th and will be open all summer. Visitors can view fifteen thousand new bulbs that have been added this year to 300 varieties of daffodils. There are an expected million or more blossoms. LongHouse Reserve provides a 16-acre landscape that includes a lotus pond. The garden is highlighted by numerous sculptures by esteemed artists such as Lichtenstein, Nevelson, Takaezu, Chihuly, deKooning, and others. The Reserve is located at 133 Hands Creek Road.

A great punctuation to the spring season is the variety of gardening events hosted by philanthropic groups and societies. Far too few people, it seems, take advantage of these spectacular shows that provide great opportunities to learn and to see spectacular garden displays.

In Bridgehampton, the Horticultural Alliance of the Hamptons has several events planned this spring. The Alliance conducts its annual Garden Fair on Saturday, May 14th from 9 a.m. – 1 p.m. The fair offers a wide variety of plants for sale, including perennials, annuals, roses, trees, and shrubs. It also provides an opportunity to purchase specialty plants that have been grown by Alliance members, and the opportunity to speak with experienced, knowledgeable Alliance members. The Alliance Library, located at the Bridgehampton Community House, has one of the best collections of books on gardening on the entire East Coast.

The Southampton Rose Society's Rose Garden, located at the Rogers Memorial Library in Southampton, is a "must see," with its beautiful gazebo, display of roses, and memorials. The Society, devoted to the cultivation and preservation of roses, will be conducting its annual Rose competition in June. The competition takes place on June 18th and provides an opportunity to see magnificently grown roses. The Society also conducts its annual Garden Tour (this year it takes place on June 25th from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.). The Tour typically includes a visit to several fabulously crafted, private gardens. Those interested in either the tour or competition can contact Nancy Rollins (631-287-5460).

As part of your spring endeavors, don't forget to set aside some time to "just enjoy the season." It won't last for long! An afternoon or two devoted to exploring the beaches, nurseries, and woods, as well as participating in some of the great gardening events on the East End, will be time well spent.

You can contact Lance Brilliantine with any questions or comments at GardenLance@yahoo.com.

Melons in Your Own Backyard

"Many wagon-loads of enormous water-melons were brought to market every day..... groups of men, women, and children seated on the pavement round the spot where they were sold, sucking in prodigious quantities of this water fruit..... the huge fruit is cut into half a dozen sections, of about a foot long, and then, dripping as it is with water, applied to the mouth, from either side.....while a mouthful of the hard black seeds are shot out in all directions, to the great annoyance of all within reach. When I first tasted this fruit I thought it very vile stuff indeed, but before the end of the season we all learned to like it."

—Frances Trollope (1780-1865)

Melons came from the hot valleys of southwest Asia over 4,000 years ago. In 1395, the word "melon" originated in Melos (the Greek Cyclades Islands). Melons have never been spotted growing in the wild. In the 1600s, American settlers grew the earliest varieties of melons: honeydews and casabas. Today, most of the melons we find in supermarkets are grown in the US, in warm weather states like Florida, Texas, California, Arizona, and Georgia. During the off-seasons, we rely on imported melons from Central America, Chile, or New Zealand.

The followers of Mohammed wrote that eating a melon produces a thousand good works. I wonder if they also liked to eat them because of their high water content! Melons are also low in calories, fat free and cholesterol free. They are an excellent source of potassium and vitamin C, and a tremendous amount of Beta-carotene (which helps to prevent cancer and heart disease and boosts immunity) can be found in the orange-fleshed varieties, like cantaloupe.

Melons are warm weather fruits, thriving in temperatures from 70-80 degrees F. They're at their peak ripeness in late summer/ early-mid fall, so they grow best in places with long summers. Belonging to the same botanical family as squash, larger melons can weigh as much as 15 pounds, and the smallest melons are a little larger than a grapefruit. The seeds are located in the hollow center of the sweet fruit, which grow on vines. Watermelons are the only exception; their seeds are dispersed in a radial pattern, like a cucumber.

Whether it's for decoration or food, growing melons can be fun. If you are going to start from seeds, begin growing them indoors one or two weeks before the last expected frost. Find a spot in your garden that has plenty of sunlight and air circulation. Add a good deal of compost to the soil and form hilled rows. Cover the soil with a sheet of black plastic. About three weeks after the last frost prepare to move the melon plants to the soil.

Cut small slits in the black plastic every three to six feet, depending on the type of melon you are growing (check directions on seed packets for this). Plant the seedlings an inch deep in the soil and mulch with salt hay, compost or straw in the early stages, until flowers appear. Plants should get about an inch of water each week. Remove ground cover and mist with compost tea or fish emulsion. When melons are half-grown, place a board beneath each melon to prevent the fruit from rotting. Cutting back on the water once the melons begin to ripen allows for more flavor and a sweeter taste.

When selecting melons always check for bruises, cracks, dark or soft spots. A sweet fruity fragrance will tell you when most melons are fully matured. When a melon is cut from the vine, it won't get any sweeter just sitting there, so it's ready for immediate consumption!

Once you bring them home, keep melons at room temperature for 2-4 days to increase the juiciness and softness. Ripened melons can be refrigerated for up to 5 days. Cut melons will stay fresh in the refrigerator for up to 3 days. Keep in mind that melons have a potent fragrance, and should be wrapped in plastic, so as not to contaminate the taste of your other foods.

"When one has tasted watermelon he knows what the angels eat."—Mark Twain. You don't have to be a perfect angel to enjoy melons this summer. And, however you slice it, they are a great way to get your 5 servings of fruit a day.

Soil Soup – Stimulate Your Garden The Organic Way

The breath of springtime is officially permeating the air, and that means one thing to our browning fields and naked trees: rebirth. The tulips of spring are poking their heads out, reaching for the sun. We live in a biologically rich area, where the soil is thick with nutrients and plants flourish as the sun warms the earth. But there are still ways in which we can help our little sapling trees and sprouting bulbs to flourish. One excellent product, certified organic and absolutely delicious for the plants, is Soil Soup.

Soil Soup was started by a few gardeners who wanted to enrich their plants in a way that was harmonious with the environment. There is such an excess of positive waste that goes unused in our culture. Soil Soup is designed to utilize this waste to its absolute maximum potential.

So what is this miracle soil stimulant made of? It certainly doesn't consist of any of the detrimental pesticides that coat your tomatoes. It is a liquid consistency, best described as black goop. Soil Soup Nutrient Solution is a molasses based product designed to encourage bacterial growth. Materials include seabird and bat guano, natural sulfates, carbonates, citric acid and seaweed.

The solution is a concentrate with a dilution rate of 128 to 1. For each gallon of organic liquid compost, only one liquid ounce of nutrient solution is needed. One gallon can be purchased for $29.99.

It operates on a system of microbes, which are absorbed from the bat guano and secreted into the soil. Soil Soup is designed to feed these microbes a complete diet. It maintains a symbiotic relationship with the roots of the plant. This means that it is mutually beneficial for both the plant and the microbes. Soil Soup adds nitrogen-fixing microbes to the soil. In dry, arid climates, these nitrogen agents are not present. Also, Soil Soup is excellent for potted plants, which may be lacking in certain nutrients that are not in the pot.

Soil Soup is also a great way to stimulate your compost. By adding a serving of Soup to your compost heap, you can increase the rate of development by 2 1/2 times. That means you can still begin a compost pile that will be usable this season!

Adding one serving to your plants at the beginning of the season will keep them on the healthy road to growth for about six months, when you can add another dose.

Also available from the makers of Soil Soup is a ten pound bag of worm compost, or two different brewing systems which include Soil Soup, Worm

Compost, an organic tea compost, a compost bin, and other items.

Jerry Erickson, who founded Soil Soup in 1998, prides himself on the fact that it is an organic method of efficient gardening that is no more expensive than inorganic methods, like pesticides and chemical fertilizers. One of the major problems for small farms and backyard gardeners who are looking to go organic is that it is too expensive to make the switch. Soil Soup offers an affordable way to garden with the earth and for the earth.

Soil Soup is receiving rave reviews from gardeners from all climates. Whether your soil is lacking in nutrients because of an arid climate, or whether a disease is spreading among plants in your area, Soil Soup gives your plants the weapons they need to fight for their survival without compromising the environment.

You can find out more about Soil Soup on their website (www.soilsoup.com), or give them a call at 877-711-7687.

Sharing Space

Sharing a house with one or more people is a unique learning experience, whether in a semi-permanent or a seasonal situation. It can put a strain on an existing friendship, or it may bring people together, as communication skills are put to the ultimate test. Just like maintaining a healthy marriage, successfully living with others requires a great deal of consideration, cooperation, and compromise.

Get to know the basics about the person or people you'll be bunking with. Start by discussing your backgrounds and previous living situations, so you can each get an idea of what lifestyles the others are accustomed to. Share with each other as much as you comfortably can about family and friends, and even take it a step further to include hobbies and favorites. Revealing any habits, beliefs, and opinions, as well as similarities and differences, will be helpful in avoiding any uncomfortable issues you may encounter down the road.

After small talk is over, money matters need to be seriously discussed. Rent is an obvious expense, and is usually split down the middle. (In some cases, one might be willing to pay more for the larger bedroom.) The total amount should be collected from everyone, and handed over to the landlord by one person, to avoid confusion. Monthly bills such as utilities, cable and phone, should also be handled in a fair manner. A memo board in a communal area (such as the kitchen) is a good place to keep track of bills that need to be paid on certain dates.

Food consumption seems like a petty subject to discuss in detail, but it's the most common complaint I've heard from those who live with others. If you have the same food preference as your roommates, sharing can be possible, and buying in bulk can become a wonderful money saving option. But even then, the issue may arise of who's eating how much. You might want to be safe and keep food separate by assigning all parties designated shelves in the fridge and cupboards. You may even decide on one universal shelf or section of food (like condiments or staples) for everyone to enjoy.

Sleep and study hours are truly sacred. These precious periods of time should be announced by each individual and recognized by everyone. There are "morning" and "night" people, and then there are those that are ultra sensitive to noise. Not everyone is on the same schedule, but a sufficient amount of uninterrupted sleep is important to just about everyone. You can keep track of quiet hours by clearly displaying them on the communal memo board.

Summer months commonly call for social gatherings, which often lead to impromptu sleepovers. Extra noise and messy guests will most likely lead to problems. Whenever possible, make an attempt to get the approval of your housemates before inviting houseguests – especially the overnight kind! An unspoken rule of rooming: a stay of more than 2 nights is inappropriate and not encouraged.

Keep it clean when it comes to common grounds such as the kitchen, bathroom, living room, and outdoor entertaining areas. Set a schedule for general maintenance of frequently trodden areas, so that each inhabitant does a fair share. To make it easier for yourself and everyone else, get in the habit of picking up after yourself every time you leave a room. Even if you have a particular passion for picking things up, don't develop the habit of picking up after your roommates, to avoid the risk of having to repeat the activity the next time they make a mess. Simply state how you feel, calmly and clearly, so that they know how you feel about the upkeep.

If communication and consideration are continuous, living together can be harmonious and beneficial to all parties involved. Sharing your space may lead to friendships that last a lifetime.

Tools For Your Tresses

When it comes to our hair, we will stop at nothing to find the right tool to give us the look we want. Fortunately for us, our hair no longer has to be subjected to the stress and damage caused by old fashioned dryers, curling and flat irons.

This is due to two revolutionary techniques: the ceramic method and Bio ionics. Today's hair products base their design on these principles so tools are safer and improve hair quality.

The ceramics method makes your hair healthier by plugging the hair follicles and also reduces bacteria accumulation.

Bio ionic hair care was discovered by the Japanese in 1975. The system is known as the Trinity FX. This process resurrects lifeless and unmanageable hair. Even though it was originally developed to rejuvenate hair, it proved to straighten hair as well. The Trinity FX Complex is a powdered mineral with a low chemical content that prevents itching and burning.

Infrared, electromagnetic and negative ionic waves work together to break apart water molecules. This allows moisture to permeate the hair shaft, causing faster drying.

PGM Incorporated, which does consumer research review, found both the Vidal Sassoon Ionic hair dryers, models VS754 and VS519, ranked high for non professional use. Although the 519 lacks the LED display and ceramic coded grill featured on the 754, it has a cool shut button and diffuser attachment. The 754 has an airflow concentrator attachment and removable filter which cuts down on drying time without compromising your hair's silky, shimmering texture.

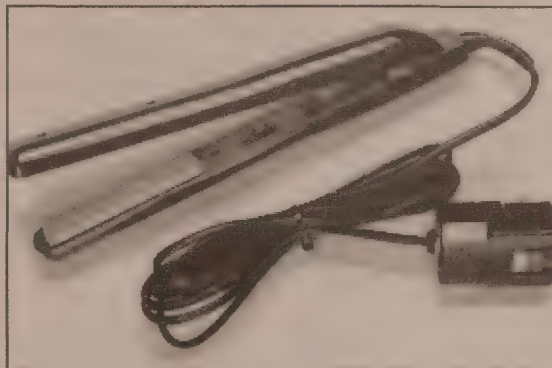

On a professional level, although the Super Solano (which does not use ions), put out by Solano International, seemed to be the favored dryer in salons; the CHI Ceramic Ionic Hair Dryer proved to be the winner in a comparative test of ion dryers conducted by the Wall Street Journal. Both have the advantage of withstanding heavy daily salon application.

The ionic dryer is just one of the basic tools we need to help us manage our hair. For those of us who long for curls and others who desire a sleek, straight look, we now have ceramic curling irons and flat irons to give our limp hair some bounce or our dense, matted hair a chance to relax and untangle. A good website to check out is folica (www.folica.com). They not only give product reviews but offer comparison features as well. Here are some of the irons which received a high rating for easy handling, quality and consistency.

Hot Tool Professional curling irons were among the first to use an electromagnetic heating system. This is a patented Pulse Auto Heat Control which allows the stylist to create non stop curls. Negative ions, in conjunction with infrared heat, get rid of snarls and brittle hair by restoring moisture, which makes hair simply radiant.

Ceramic Tools Professional Curling Irons help bring a polished look to your hair because heat is distributed more evenly. These irons are constructed by first sand blasting them to create a level surface; degreased so that any substance impeding ceramic technology is eliminated and finally neutralized and rinsed to guarantee that charges are balanced and surfaces are sanitized. By providing maximum heat transfer, hair is strengthened. This is because when ions are discharged bacteria is dissipated, getting rid of damaged hot spots to revitalize your hair. This curling iron has 25 settings with which to handle various types of hair.

If you'd rather go straight, the Sedu Ionic Ceramic Professional Flat Iron is sure to iron out your troubles. This particular iron contains ceramic tourmaline plates which produce six times more negative ions than those found in other standard models. Negative ions regenerate your hair, casting a velvety sheen.

Another highly rated iron was the Japanese Digital Flat Iron by Bion. The plates are scratch resistant, adding to the long life of this model. The interior houses an electromagnetic shield, which blocks out these waves. This strengthens the hair, leaving the kinks behind and adding luster.

With all these tools at our disposal, who says that we can't reinvent our hair? Our coiffs can go from curly ringlets to a suave, straight, upscale look. Maintaining our hairstyles has never been easier; not even the humidity can make our follicles go limp. We can now proudly toss our liberated locks without the worry of a bad hair day.

The Shirt On Your Back

There's nothing like a crisp white shirt. It's the quintessential clean wonderful look for spring and summer. This year, white is THE color du jour, but let's face it, a white shirt has always been a staple of any wardrobe.

There are multiple ways of wearing a white shirt, and it's a look that everyone can pull off. A white shirt can look sexy, sophisticated, smart, casual, shabby, chic, dressy, or simple and classic. Whether young, old, male, or female, if you don't have at least one white shirt in your closet, you simply don't know what you're missing. I'm urging you right now to go out and get one. If nothing else, it's a must-have, fall-back item for when you can't figure out what else to wear. Couple it with a pair of jeans, a flirty skirt, smart pants, even shorts. Hell, you can even throw a white shirt over a bathing suit and look great.

There are no ifs, ands, or buts.....you simply must have a white shirt or three on any trip, or in any closet. But whether you already have several of said item, or are sorely lacking, this week I've pounded the pavements and rummaged through racks on your behalf.

I've hunted down this season's crop shirt. And what's more, I'll give you new suggestions on how to wear them and what are the best fabrics to buy.

Where:

Banana Republic has several shirts that work well for spring. For women, there's a tailored cotton shirt, as well as a more free-flowing, sheer one that cinches in at the waist. Men can also choose from a crisp cotton tailored shirt, or a wide range of casual linen and cotton. Another retailer that has an incredible range of white shirts is the more tailored Thomas Pink. You can find them online. If you're looking for something more formal in style, try Pinks for both men and women. J Crew has a good casual range of white shirts, though remember to look at the fabric before you buy.

Anne Fontaine is a white shirt specialist. In fact, she's been said to have "revolutionized the white shirt," so checking out her designs is a must. Since the white shirt look is particularly en vogue this season, most stores are showing a terrific range, too. Locally, you can visit Theory in East Hampton. They have two white shirts in particular that are well worth a look.

They're offering a show-stopping bohemian-inspired tunic top called Bianca, with a sweeping sleeve, as well as other simple tunic style tops. Plus there are several lengths of button-downs that are always a nice staple.

What:

It's important to choose fabric carefully, especially when worn in warmer weather.

Light Pima cotton is always a nice way to go. So is sheer fabrication such as cotton voile. White with a shot of lurex or metallic going through it can add a dash of fun and elegance. This season, there are many Indian-inspired lightweight cottons with that shot of lurex in them. Silk is another option to consider, as well as linen. But remember when choosing something like linen that it creases easily. The disheveled look can be great – but only when you're intending it. Cotton keeps its shape well, but read the washing instructions carefully – cotton tends to shrink. If in doubt, wash in cold water, or send to the dry cleaners.

How and Why:

There are several different styles and innovative ways of wearing a white shirt. Here are just a few tips on what they are and how to wear them.

Remember, it's almost impossible to match whites, and so be careful if you're trying to wear the monotone look – white top and pants for example. Unless you buy them as a set, they probably won't be the same exact shade. However, you can embrace several tones of white and still make an ensemble.

Other Ideas:

–A white shirt always shows off a sun tan.

–Buy a cheap white shirt and change the buttons – it will look more expensive.

–Ladies can make a formal white shirt casual by buttoning it half way and tying it in the middle.

–Ladies and Gents can give a white dress shirt a little more pizzaz by adding cufflinks. You may even be able to nix the suit jacket with the addition of cuff links. To go casual, roll sleeves back.

–Team a basic oversized men's shirt with the more 50s style fuller skirts of this season: The shirt should be a fitted man's tailored collared one. Then button it 3/4 in length and wrap it, criss crossed in the front and around the back. Place and fasten in back in a cummerbund style. "This is a way of giving these 50s inspired pretty looks more attitude," says Pamela Bouchard, a style consultant. Either tie the shirt in back to secure, or tuck it into the other fabric above.

This is the season of the white shirt, from Indian inspired tunics to oversized casual linen at the beach. Embrace the look and put a white shirt on your back.

Salsa Dancing – Shake It Up

Salsa dancing is an integral part of Latino culture. After spending the last four months in Costa Rica, I know how important it is to be able to swivel those hips on the dance floor. In many towns, the weekly or monthly dance is the primary social event of the community. And for those larger towns that have bars and restaurants, one of the most common forms of music being played is salsa. If you watch a couple out there who know what they're doing, you'll understand why. The upbeat, usually live music carries these two bodies across the dance floor in an energetic and beautiful way. But one thing you don't want to do when attending a salsa dance is to wing it. I know from experience.

At the monthly dance in the tiny town where I was living, they pulled out all the stops. The brother of my host-father was playing the guitar, his cousin was singing, their best friend was on the drums. I was thrilled to be hearing live music. My friend and I grabbed hands and ran out onto the wide dance floor, which doubled as an indoor soccer field and tripled as a town meeting house, and we began to shake it like we knew how. Unfortunately, the best way to sum up "like we knew how" is "freeform." We were happily writhing and jumping to the flowing rhythms when I felt a tap on my shoulder. My friend felt the same thing. Two young men stood at our sides with their hands extended, obviously desiring to show us a thing or two about salsa.

At first, I have to admit, I felt like I was dancing in a box. The moves seemed so strict, his arms pushing me from position to position, my body forced to obey the steps. But once I let go of my pride, just a little bit, and allowed myself to be dancing with someone, moving together to already defined steps, I felt myself get lighter. My hips swiveled with the elegance and forethought of all the Costa Rican Mamas that I had admired from a distance. The dance was not a wild, spontaneous shaking session, but a beautiful, flowing partnership.

As a woman, when you know the dance, you simply have to let the man lead and stay light on your feet. As a man, you have to be decisive and keep up with the music. Once you learn the fundamentals of salsa, you can take to the dance floor with the energy and life that can only be achieved from the organized chaos of a good salsa partnership.

You don't have to go all the way to Central or South America to learn how to shake your tail. The Hamptons is infused with Latin influence, from the delicious food of La Fondita to the striking art of galleries like Solar and the Crazy Monkey. In addition, Latin Dance nights can be found around town on a weekly basis. Last year, 75 Main hosted weekly salsa nights, and Resort, in East Hampton, also had a Latin themed evening. This summer is certain to bring more cultural evenings from our neighboring countries, and a few lessons to get you acquainted with the dance would pay off when you're swinging across the dance floor to the unmistakable sound of salsa rhythms.

One fabulous dance instruction groups out here is called Touch Dancing. They offer group and individual instruction for all sorts of dances, from the American Tango to Merengue. Salsa lessons are, of course, offered. Partners are not required, and all staff members are certified professionals registered with the National Dance Council of America. Latin classes are offered at the Upper Parish Hall on East Union Street in Sag Harbor on Tuesdays at 7 p.m. or at Westhampton Beach Touch Dancing Studios on Sundays at 3 p.m. Also, on Saturday, May 14, Touch Dancing will host a dance at the Neighborhood House on Three-Mile Harbor Rd in East Hampton from 7:30 to 11:30 p.m. Admission is $20, or $15 with a reservation, and includes a dance class to get everyone warmed up. Call 288-5659 for more information about lessons or events.

Salsa dancing offers a great way to stay physically, socially, and emotionally active. Keep your spirits swinging and your limbs flailing to the lovely rhythms of salsa music by getting in tune with one of the most prominent aspects of Latino culture.

Real Estates by Diane Strecker

If you have not secured a summer rental in the Hamptons yet, there still may be time. The rental season started a bit late this year due to the weather and many East End brokers still have quite a bit left in their rental inventory. The very high end rentals are just a bit more difficult to fill because the truth is there are not as many potential renters that can afford them. Waterfronts, particularly oceanfronts, are in demand as always and usually are the first to go.

If you would like to rent one that resembles a "castle," there is one in North Haven for $210,000 from July through Labor Day. The 3 acre estate has 400 feet of waterfront that includes a private, white sand, bay beach. It has 5 bedrooms and 5 baths, a separate guest house, a pool and a high tech security system that is completely operated by remote control. The property is listed with the Corcoran Group in Sag Harbor. Or, there is always the Riklis Estate in Southampton on the ocean for a mere $950,000 this season. This is the highest priced rental this season to hit the market as well as the highest priced rental to ever hit the Hamptons rental market thus far. The 12 bedroom, 12 bath mansion on 8 acres is located on Meadow Lane in the prestigious Southampton Village area. It has a heated pool, tennis, a private dock on Shinnecock Bay and direct private access to the ocean beach. There are separate guest and servant wings as well as game rooms and a gym. The home is owned by Marcia Riklis, daughter of wealthy financier Meshulam Riklis. Its asking price topped that of the recent record breaking rental in East Hampton on Further Lane for $750,000, which is owned by the half sister of actress Uma Thurman.

In Westhampton Beach you can rent The West Hampton Manor for the season or for single occasions or events. The home comes completely equipped down to the silverware and linens, which of course are exquisite. The home is located on the bay that leads out to the ocean. And just last week, the home of late millionaire banker and entrepreneur Ted Ammon in East Hampton went on the rental market at $295,000 for the season. The estate consists of 25 rooms, a pool, tennis court and guest quarters. The home and its locale were sensationalized when the owner was murdered there just four years ago. The East Hampton home was one of five that Ammon owned.

The number of rentals available was highest in East Hampton, where there were more than 1800 listed. Montauk and Southampton also have had a hefty inventory of rentals. In Southampton and East Hampton most of what is on the market is high end, whereas in Montauk there is a wider range available from oceanfront estates to smaller, less pretentious homes or cottages priced as low as $50,000 for the season, considered to be reasonable by East End standards. In Montauk, there is a mansion high on the bluff overlooking the ocean available at $200,000 from August through Labor Day. This 5000 sq ft home sits on one very secluded acre and has 6 bedrooms, 7 baths and windows everywhere that show off its panoramic ocean views from just about every room. On the North Fork there are by far fewer rentals available and the really high end properties are few and far between. But, if you look in areas like Nassau Point you can find some pretty sizable waterfront estates. On Shelter Island one can find a mix of everything from a palatial waterfront estate, to a historic captain's house, to a tiny cottage.

All and all, we know that rentals on the East End have taken on a life of their own when it is evident that some pay more for a summer rental than what it may cost others to purchase a full time residence. After all, you can still find something decent for $950,000, even out here.

Lower Mortgage Payments by 45% With Sophisticated Jumbo Loan Program

NY- Mortgages for multi million dollar homes is typically limited to 50% financing, carries a higher rate and requires full income verification.

A scarcely known loan is available for home purchases and refinances that offers up to 90% financing, cuts monthly payments by as much as 45% and requires no income verification. Additionally there are enhanced tax and pre-payment advantages with increased cash flow not available with other mortgages.

Many wonder why they haven't been informed about this unique loan. One reason is this loan does not profit lenders in the same way other loans do so they're not easy to find.

The company sponsoring these programs, North Atlantic Mortgage Corp., has made a Free report

"Sophisticated Jumbo Financing" available. This report also addresses many other unique types of mortgages, credit issues, and most importantly how to get a great Jumbo loan with no income or asset verification.

If you are self-employed, professional or high-income individual, there are many other savvy "secrets" and various loan options that you probably aren't aware that exist.

DIGGING YOUR OWN GRAVE

Dear Dan,

I currently attend Southampton College, and was wondering if you knew what the deal was with all the shovels in the front lawn? I drove by today and there were well over 100 shovels lined up in some sort of display. Maybe it's just me, but the last time I was in Home Depot, a single shovel was $20. I thought Southampton of LIU was broke . . .

A WHALE OF A TALE

Dear Dan,

This morning I read the Whale Roast article and I had to leave my computer for a second to go ask my husband if people really eat whale. He gave me that raised eyebrow and half cocked smile look as he broke his focus on his laptop and simply said, "no, people don't eat blubber. Not for a long time." And I came back to my computer and read the story again and thought whales stink to high heavens, don't they? You got me...

DANCEWAVE

Dear Dan,

I just wanted to thank Robin Smith for masterminding the fantastic piece that was in your paper about my daughter's dance company. I didn't realize she had masterminded it and I am so appreciative. It was such a great story and went immediately into the scrapbook. The performance was superb, there was a really good turn out and they were invited back for next year on the spot. So...thanks so much and I apologize for not having written sooner.

RACE FOR TRUTH

Dear Dan,

If was fun to read of David's experience both before and during the Boston Marathon. I also ran the race this year, and noticed that the photo accompanying this week's article was not of the Boston Marathon, but of a different race.

Makes me wonder about the accuracy of the rest of the content, such as the whale roast.

TA-TA TURTLES?

Dear Dan,

In one of the recent issues of Dan's Papers you wrote a sensitive and though provoking piece on migrating sanderlings, observed while at the beach. In further appreciation of our dwindling indigenous wildlife, can you champion the survival of another, more vulnerable creature? I am speaking of the familiar Easter Box Turtle, which will soon merge from hibernation and be on the move to breed.

With increased development, population and vehicular traffic, these amazing and potentially long lived animals are dwindling in number I believe East Hampton, last year, initiated a sign campaign to remind motorists to give them a BRAKE, and pedestrians as well, to give them a hand when safely possible, across a road. Southampton has no such initiative, and I am not sure about the other eastern Long Island towns.

Since your publications reach so many of the appropriate people (i.e. residents permanent, transient and seasonal), it would be a great service to these little guys to remind folks in your inimitable manner, to be a little more circumspect when in areas of turtle activity.

My sister in western Suffolk, has long had a sign Turtle Crossing in front of her home. No turtles cross there any more. Thanks for listening.

FILIBUSTERS FOR FILMS?

Dear Dan,

This is a call to action to my fellow citizens. Can you imagine living in a world where you could not now nor ever, have seen. Mr. Smith Goes to Washington?

I, for one, cannot. But that is just what many in Washington are proposing with the pushing of the "nuclear option" There will never be a Capra Classic because the concept of filibuster will not exist. The "nuclear option" is a parliamentary trick to eliminate the filibuster - the right to extend debate on controversial judicial nominations. Please stand up and be counted to oppose "The nuclear option" a ploy to seize absolute power to appoint judges who will roll back decades of progress in protecting worker rights, the environment, and privacy.

If you won't do it for yourself and children do it for the love of a good movie

Police Blotter

Dicey Delivery..... According to Southampton Police reports, a man making a delivery to a Hampton Bays woman who resides on Lynn Avenue got a bit more than perhaps he expected. When the woman was informed that she would have to pay for the package being delivered to her, she balked. While the deliveryman wasn't badly hurt, he did want the incident on record. Apparently the woman grabbed his clipboard and smacked him on his arm and hand.

* * *

Took It To-Go Anyway. Even after his credit card was rejected at a shop on Montauk Highway in Hampton Bays.....the man strolled out with a deep-fried flounder sandwich anyway. Guess hunger took over and clouded reason.

* * *

...With Friends Like These... Approximately $9,000 in jewelry was stolen from a Water Mill home earlier this month. The woman remembers the jewelry being in a box on her dresser, but after friends of her son visited...the jewels were gone. Just like that...and so were the guests.

* * *

Viagra Puts Pep In Step.....At Work! Exactly the place to take a Viagra - on the job. Of course, that would depend on what line of work you're in. In a case reported to Southampton Town Police, the complainant wasn't necessarily in, umm.....that sort of employ. Apparently, he was "assaulted" after receiving a performance review by a superior. Why get mad.....when you can get even? The worker then told a few people on the job that he put a Viagra in the foreman's drink. When confronted, he said he was only joking. The foreman wasn't buying it.

* * *

Turns.....Into A Bang Up Job. Though neither driver was injured, a passenger in one of the cars did complain of leg and knee pain following this little fender-bender. At the intersection of Stephen Hand's Path and Montauk Highway in East Hampton a car making a turn was rammed from behind by another vehicle. The passenger was taken to Southampton Hospital.

* * *

Untimely Valhalla? It appears to be open season on Vikings. Another range that was left unattended disappeared and foul play is suspected. The $7,000 stove was placed near a garage at a house on Georgica Road in East Hampton. According to a contractor at the scene, who reported the thievery to East Hampton Village Police, the appliance was supposed to have been picked up, but was instead picked off.

* * *

I Scream. You Scream. We All Scream, For Flat Screen.....And Then Some Steal. Some time earlier this month, a $9,000 plasma screen television disappeared from the walls of a Westwood Road home in Wainscott. Apparently the owner is having a new addition constructed and several workers and contractors have access to the property.

* * *

How Much Wood Can A Woodchuck Chuck? I suppose it depends, but in this case about $1,500 worth. In the cover of darkness, some sticky fingered wood fiend stole a horde of mahogany wood from the front yard of a Mill Farm Lane home that is under construction in Water Mill.

* * *

Let's Take It Outside! Apparently the manager of the IGA Supermarket in Amagansett spied a man inside the store who had been caught shoplifting and was subsequently arrested. When the shop keep asked the man to leave the premises.....the man made him an offer, which was easy to refuse. "[Let's] step outside," he said; the manager called authorities.

* * *

Now You See It. Now You Kinda' Don't. An "almost" disappearing act took place on Newtown Lane in East Hampton Village the other week. It seems excavation work that Suffolk County Water Authority had done in the area caused a sinkhole, which practically swallowed a Springs resident's car.
